PREFACE.

No apology need be offered for the publication of this Register. It is, indeed, a pity that the principal colleges of India, unlike those of the West, do not possess such records. The Presidency College of Calcutta has maintained, since its birth a hundred and ten years ago, a career that merits study. It has produced men of whom any institution may well be proud. It is but meet that Presidency College should have a record of its activities—the activities of those who built it up as well as of those whom it fashioned. The present publication, perhaps the first of its kind in this country, is intended to serve that purpose; and its compilers, who along with so many others are proud of their College, have great pleasure in placing it before the public.

The scheme for the compilation of a College Register was first put forward by Principal H. R. James in connexion with the Centenary celebrations of the College. But owing to his departure from India, as well as the disturbed conditions caused by the Great War, nothing further was done until the scheme was revived in August 1924, by Principal H. E. Stapleton as President of the College Union and Professor K. Zachariah as Head of the Department of History. Appeals were issued through the Press to all old students, requesting them to furnish the necessary items of information. Printed forms were also supplied to ex-students for the purpose. A systematic perusal of Civil Lists, Directories and like publications was brought to bear upon the task. No pains have been spared to make the Register as complete as circumstances would permit.

The list of graduates (1858-1925) has been prepared from University Calendars. Under-graduate ex-students have been, as a rule, excluded from the Register, except those who have supplied information regarding their career in response to the appeals issued. As the old Attendance Registers of the College have not all been preserved, it has not been found possible to incorporate the names of those who did not actually pass some University examination from this College. The names of ex-students (with details of their career where available) have been divided into three groups—the first covering the period from 1857 to 1884, the second from 1885 to 1908, and the third from 1909 to 1925. The names under each of these groups have been arranged alphabetically.

Such, briefly, is the plan of work the compilers have followed; and none are more conscious than they, of the many defects of this publication. The appeals for detailed and accurate information did not, unfortunately, bring forth sufficient response. It is hoped, however, to make up the deficiencies in future editions. With this object in view, forms are appended to this volume that they may be filled up and sent to the Principal. If such kind of help be forthcoming, it will not be impossible to publish revised editions of the work every five or seven years. The present issue is being supplied at a low price to ensure wide publicity.

The plan of the work is Principal H. E. Stapleton's. But for his untiring exertions, active help and deep sympathy the Register would not have seen the light of day. Mr. T. S. Sterling, succeeding Mr. Stapleton as Principal in June last, bestowed on the work of compilation the same care and sympathy. Professor K. Zachariah and Professor B. K. Sen (during the former's absence on leave), very kindly revised portions of the manuscript. Thanks are due to Mr. Sureschandra Roy, Keeper of Records with the Government of Bengal, for his kind loan of the only available copy of a book by his father, Mr. Krishnachandra Roy, on "Higher Education in Bengal" (1882), which has been of much help in the preparation of the first list of old students (1857-1884). Acknowledgement must also be made of the ungrudging help occasionally received from Mr. Sachindranath Mukerjee, Vakil and Journalist, and from Mr. Mahfuzul Huq, Lecturer in Persian at this College.

If, with all its faults, the Register serves even to some extent the purpose for which it was planned, the compilers will have satisfaction in the thought that their labours have not been in vain.

PART I: INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

The Hindu College, 1816-1855.

The Hindu College was the original institution which was transformed later into the Presidency College. The Hindu College came into being as the result of the spontaneous desire of the Hindus of Bengal to diffuse the knowledge of western science and literature.

The East India Company, for more than a century, made no serious effort to encourage the study of English. Sir John Shore, in his "Notes on Indian Affairs," lamented that no rational attempt had been made to educate the people in their own language and literature, and that those who had leisure or inclination had been afforded no "means of acquiring that knowledge in which the most general information is concentrated—the English". The Education despatches of the Court of Directors of 1813 and 1814 accordingly provided that a sum of not less than £10,000 should be set apart every year out of the surplus, for "the revival and improvement of literature and the encouragement of the learned natives of India, and for the introduction and promotion of a knowledge of the [Oriental] sciences among the inhabitants of the British territories of India".

With the creation of the Supreme Court of Calcutta in 1774, many Hindus of Bengal became eager to learn the English language. Schools were set up by those who had, in one way or another, acquired a smattering of English; but all they taught was spelling and lists of common words, useful in business. This meagre fare could not long satisfy the appetite of Bengal, and a general desire was felt for a stronger intellectual pabulum.

The first step was taken by a remarkable man, a Scotsman by birth, a watch-maker by profession, who was deeply interested in the well-being of the land of his adoption. David Hare had already established vernacular schools, but found that in that medium it was impossible to advance beyond the rudiments. Teachers were ill-equipped and parents were unwilling to let their children proceed further in the vernacular than the elements of reading, writing and arithmetic. In collaboration with Raja Radhakanta Deb, he therefore started an English school near the central vernacular school; and in a conference with some of the leading Hindus, he sketched a plan for an advanced English school on a large scale. This chimed in exactly with their own ideas. Babu Buddinath Mukherjee enlisted the support of the Chief Justice, Sir Edward Hyde East, who called a meeting of European and Hindu gentlemen, early in May 1816, in his house to discuss the proposal to establish "an institution for giving a liberal education to the children of the members of the Hindu community". The proposal was received with unanimous approbation and subscriptions were promised to the amount of Rs. 1,13,179. Raja Ram Mohan Roy had full sympathy with the scheme, but did not appear publicly in its support for fear of "alarming the prejudices of his orthodox countrymen and thus marring the whole cause".

In later meetings, a Committee was appointed, with Sir Edward Hyde East as President and Joseph Barètto as Treasurer; but the European members presently withdrew from "active participation in the management, desiring only to be considered as private friends to the scheme and as ready to afford their advice and assistance when consulted".. A Sub-Committee was chosen to select a proper site for the college; and careful rules were drawn up, which were finally approved by the subscribers at a general meeting held on the 27th August 1816. These original rules are interesting enough to justify reproduction:—

RULES OF THE HINDU COLLEGE.

Tuition.

1. The primary object of this institution is, the tuition of the sons of respectable Hindus in the English and Indian languages, and in the literature and science of Europe and Asia.

2. The admission of pupils shall be left to the discretion of the Managers of the institution.

3. The college shall include a school (patshalla) and an academy (maha patshalla)—the former to be established immediately, the latter as soon as may be practicable.

4. In the school shall be taught English and Bengali, Reading, Writing, Grammar and Arithmetic by the improved method of instruction. The Persian language may also be taught in the school until the academy be established, as far as shall be found convenient.

5. In the academy, besides the study of such language as cannot be so conveniently taught in the school, instruction shall be given in History, Geography, Chronology, Astronomy, and Mathematics, Chemistry, and other sciences.

6. The Managers shall determine at what age students shall be admitted to the school and academy. The English language shall not be taught to boys under eight years of age, without the permission of the Managers in each particular instance.

7. Public examinations shall be held at stated times to be fixed by the Managers, and students who particularly distinguish themselves shall receive honorary rewards.

8. Boys who are distinguished in the school for proficiency and good conduct shall, at the discretion of the Managers, receive further instruction at the academy, free of charge. If the funds of the institution should not be sufficient to defray the expenses, benevolent individuals shall be invited to contribute the amount.

9. When a student is about to leave either the school or the academy, a certificate shall be given him under the signature of the Superintendents, stating the period during which he has studied the subject of his studies and the proficiency made by him, with such particulars of his name, age, parentage and place of residence as may be requisite to identify him.

Funds and Privileges.

10. There shall be two distinct funds to be denominated the College Fund and the Education Fund for which separate subscription books shall be opened, and all persons who have already subscribed to this institution shall be at liberty to direct an appropriation of their contribution to either fund or partly to both.

11. The object of the College Fund is to form a charitable foundation for the advancement of learning and in aid of the Education Fund. Its ultimate purpose will be the purchase of ground, and construction of suitable buildings thereupon, for the permanent use of the college, as well as to provide all necessary articles of furniture, books, a philosophical apparatus and whatever else may be requisite for the full accomplishment of the objects of the institution. In the meantime, until a sufficient sum be raised for erecting a college, the contributions to this fund may be applied, as far as requisite, to the payment of house rent and any other current expenditure on account of the college.

12. The amount subscribed to the Education Fund shall be appropriated to the education of pupils and expense of tuition.

13. All subscribers will be expected to pay the amount of their contributions to the Treasurer, either at the time of subscription or at the latest within a month from that time, the payment to be made in cash, or what the Treasurer may consider equivalent to cash.

14. All the subscribers to the College Fund before the 21st day of May 1817, being the anniversary of the day on which it was agreed to establish this institution, shall be considered "founders of the college", and their names shall be recorded as such, with the amount of their respective contributions. The highest single contributors at the close of the period above mentioned, viz., on the 21st day of May 1817, shall be recorded "chief founders of the college", and all persons contributing separately the sum of 5,000 rupees and upward shall be classed next, and distinguished as "principal founders"; under their subscriptions shall be registered those of the other subscribers to the College Fund, arranged according to the amount contributed by each individual and the dates of subscription.

15. Every single contributor of 5,000 rupees and upward to the College Fund, before the aggregate sum of a lakh and a half of sicca rupees may have been subscribed to that fund, shall be an Hereditable Governor of the college. He shall be entitled, on payment of this subscription, to act in person or by an appointed deputy as a member of the Committee of the Managers. He may leave his office of Hereditable Governor, with all its privileges, by a written will or other documents, to any of his sons or other individual of his family, whom he may wish to succeed thereto on his demise; should he fail thus to appoint a successor, his legal heir shall be at liberty to nominate any one of his family to succeed him. Should a question arise among them concerning the right of succession, it shall be determined by the Managers.

16. Subscribers to the College Fund, who are not Governors and whose joint or separate subscriptions to it (made before a lakh and a half of sicca rupees shall have been contributed to it) shall collectively amount to 5,000 rupees, shall be entitled to elect any one of their members to be a Director of the college. After paying their subscription amounting to 5,000 rupees, they shall transmit a written notification to the Secretary of the Committee of Managers, bearing their respective seals or signatures, and specifying the name and designation of the person elected by them to be a Director for the current year. A statement of their several contributions to the College Fund shall also accompany the notification or be included in it, for the purpose of showing their title to make the election.

17. The persons selected, after the regularity of their election has been verified by the Committee of Managers, shall be considered Directors till the 21st day of May next, on or before which date a similar election and notification to the Secretary shall be made for the ensuing year and so on successively from year to year, provided however that on the death of any joint or separate subscriber, the privilege of election shall be considered extinct with respect to his proportion of a joint subscription or the amount of any separate subscription made by him and included in the aggregate sum of 5,000 rupees, which must consequently be supplied by an additional contribution or the union of an additional subscriber in order to maintain the privileges of electing a Director for the ensuing year.

18. An individual contribution of 5,000 rupees and upward to the College Fund made subsequently to the aggregate subscription of a lakh and a half of sicca rupees to that fund shall not entitle the contributor to become an Hereditable Governor, but he shall be a Governor for life and be entitled, on payment of his subscription, to act in person or by an appointed deputy as a member of the Committee of Managers during his life time.

19. The Managers will determine what shall be the privileges, with regard to the election of annual Directors, to be enjoyed by the contributors to the College Fund, of further sums of money subscribed after the completion of a lakh and a half of rupees sicca.

20. The subscription to the Education Fund shall be restricted for the present to the admission of one hundred scholars into the school of the institution—that being calculated to be the greatest number which can be admitted during the first year without detriment to the good order of the school and the progress of the scholars. The subscriptions will, however, be extended as soon as a greater number can be admitted.

21. A subscriber of 400 sicca rupees to the Education Fund shall be entitled send a pupil to receive instruction in the school free of any expense for the rm of four years. The subscription with a corresponding privilege may also be for any shorter period not being less than one year, at the rate of 120 rupees per annum.

22. If the pupil for whose tuition a subscription shall have been made be found on examination to be qualified to leave the school before the expiration of the period subscribed for, he shall be entitled to receive a proportion of the same paid by his patron corresponding with the term unexpired.

23. If a pupil dies before the expiration of the period subscribed for, his patron may at his option send another for the unexpired term, or receive back a portion of his subscription, or have a proportionate credit in making a new subscription.

24. In all calculations of time relative to the Education Fund the English calendar shall be observed, and fractional parts of a month shall not be reckoned against the institution.

25. Any number of contributors to the Education Fund (not being Governor) before the completion of one hundred scholarships mentioned in the 20th article, the aggregate of whose subscriptions may amount to 5,000 rupees, shall have the same privilege of electing an annual Director as is given by the 16th and 17th articles to subscribers of the same amount to the College Fund: except that their privilege, instead of extending to the life of the subscribers, shall be restricted to the period for which the subscription is made; with this limitation of privilege, they may also unite with subscribers to the College Fund in electing Directors.

Government.

26 The government of the college shall be vested in a Committee of Managers to consist of Hereditable Governors, Governors for Life and Annual Directors, or their respective deputies

27. The Managers shall possess full powers to carry into effect the whole of the rules now established. They may also pass additional rules.

28. The Managers shall be trustees of the fund and shall be empowered to issue any requisite instructions to the Treasurer, as well as to pass all accounts of receipts and disbursements, often causing the same to be audited in such manner as may be found expedient.

29. The Committee of Managers will appoint a European Secretary and native Assistant Secretary who shall also be superintendents of the college, under the direction and control of the Committee. The appointment and removal of teachers and all other officers whom it may be necessary to employ in any department of the college shall be vested in the Managers.

30. The ordinary meetings of the Managers shall be on stated days and as often as may be found necessary When extraordinary meetings may be requisite, they shall be convened by the Secretaries. The attendance of at least three members shall be required to constitute a meeting on common occasions, and when a new rule or the abolition of an existing rule is to be considered, notice shall be given to all the members or their deputies in or near Calcutta, that a full attendance of the Committee may be obtained.

31. All questions shall be determined by a majority of voices of those present.

32. Any member of the Committee who from not residing in Calcutta or its vicinity or from any other cause may be unable to attend its meetings in person, may, by a letter addressed to the Secretary, appoint a fit person, residing in Calcutta or its suburbs, to act as his deputy, and such person if approved by the Committee shall be entitled to attend its meetings and vote on all questions before it in like manner as the member represented by him.

33 The Managers may delegate to one, two, or more of their number, any particular duty which can be more conveniently performed by such delegation; and are empowered to direct and execute all matters of details, not specially provided for by the rules now established, in such manner as they may judge best for the institution entrusted to them.

34. There shall be an Annual General Meeting of the subscribers at which a report shall be made to them of the state of the funds and progress of the institution.

The college was formally opened on Monday, the 20th January 1817, with twenty scholars. The next day, Visitors' Day, Buddinath Mukherjee, the native Secretary, declared to those present the hope (since so largely fulfilled) that "the school, which yet was but a seedling, would many years hence resemble the bur tree, which when fully grown was the largest of trees in India, cooling and refreshing all those who came under its shade".

The control of the institution was vested in a body of two Governors and four Directors. The first Governors were Maharaja Tejchandra Bahadur of Burdwan and Babu Gopeemohan Thakoor, who had each subscribed Rs. 10,000 to the funds; the original Directors were Babu Gopeemohan Deb, Babu Joykissen Sing, Babu Radhamadhab Banerjee and Babu Gunganarain Doss. But enthusiasm soon waned. The executive functions were presently entrusted to a Committee of Management of four members elected annually by the Directors. After a few years, the election was no longer held and the existing Committee of Management came to regard itself as a permanent body with certain vested rights and inalienable privileges. Besides the native Secretary, there was an English Secretary, Lieutenant Francis Irvine, charged with the superintendence of the English Department of the college.

It may be worth while to mention here for the benefit of the present generation that Gopeemohan Thakoor was the father of Prosonno Coomar Tagore, C.S.I., and grandfather of Maharaja Sir Jotindramohan Tagore. Gopeemohan Deb was the father of Raja Sir Radhakant Deb Bahadur of Sobhabazar and grandfather of Raja Benoy Krishna Deb. Joykissen Sing was the grandfather of Kaliprasanna Sinha, the translator of the Mahabharata into Bengali. And Buddinath Mukherjee was the grandfather of Justice Anukul Chandra Mukherjee.

The classes were held at first in a rented house, belonging to Gorachand Bysack, at Garanhatta (afterwards No. 304, Chitpore Road), a house of some importance in educational history, as it was in it that the Oriental Seminary found shelter later on, and to it the General Assembly's Institution (now merged in the Scottish Churches College) moved in 1836 for want of accommodation. The Hindu College did not dwell there long, but shifted to another house in January 1818, and to still another in the same locality, known as "Feringhee Kamal Bose's house", a year later. This was another historic building; here Raja Ram Mohan Roy inaugurated his Brahma Sabha, and here Duff started his educational establishment in 1834. From Chitpore the Hindu College eventually migrated to Bowbazar and later to the building which now houses the Sanskrit College.

The numbers increased rapidly, from 20 on the opening day to 69 within three months. The Calcutta School Society, founded in September 1818 on the initiative of David Hare, sent 20 or 30 of the most promising pupils from its schools to the college at its own expense. Other pupils had to pay fees, but it soon became clear that the imposition of fees deterred many parents from sending their boys to the college. In January 1819 fees were abolished and the Hindu College became a free institution, depending for its support on the voluntary contributions of generous Hindus and on the interest of the amount originally subscribed.

These resources, however, proved entirely inadequate. Expenses were reduced by the abolition of pay for the two Secretaries; but even this was not enough; and in 1823, on Hare's advice, the Manager asked

Government for pecuniary assistance. The subscribed funds, at this time about Rs. 65,000, yielded an interest of only Rs. 400 per mensem; and they petitioned that the Hindu College should be removed to the vicinity of the Sanskrit College which was about to be founded, and that the two institutions should share lectures, the use of scientific apparata, etc.

The petition was well-timed. Mr. Adam, the successor of the Marquis of Hastings, had in July 1823 appointed a General Committee of Public Instruction, which was sanctioned by the Board of Directors in their despatch of the 18th February 1824. The application came before this Committee, and a long memorandum was submitted by Mr. H. H. Wilson, the Secretary to the Committee—then an officer in the Medical Department, and afterwards Boden Professor of Sanskrit at Oxford. He wished to keep the Hindu College and the Sanskrit College quite distinct, in buildings and management, but admitted that lectures might, to some extent, be common. The Governor-General sanctioned the construction of a building for the Sanskrit College, with two wings to serve as school and lecture rooms for the Hindu College, of which he also consented to become the patron.

But the financial position of the Hindu College continued precarious—in spite of the re-introduction of fees in 1824 at the rate of Rs. 5 per mensem. Even then, the total monthly income was no more than Rs. 840; and Government was again asked for aid. It was agreed that till the new buildings were completed, Government should give a grant of Rs. 280 a month for house rent for the Hindu College. Government sanctioned besides the endowment of a Professorship in Experimental Philosophy, the lectures being open to the senior students of both colleges. An assurance was also given that a competent man would be appointed and supported from Government funds to give instruction in Western Science; some scientific apparatus had already arrived.

Now, Government was fully alive to the principle that he who pays the piper should call the tune. The Managers of the Hindu College were accordingly informed that "with reference to the extent of the aid already given to the funds of the Hindu College and other arrangements in contemplation for its improvement, such as the grant of a library, endowments of scholarships and a liberal provision for the most effective superintendence that can be obtained, the expense of which will probably be fully three times the amount now derived from the funds of the college, Government conceive that a proportional share of authority over that establishment should be vested in the General Committee of Public Instruction". Although the Managers were at first divided, they wrote to the General Committee on the 1st July 1824, proposing a Joint Committee of equal numbers, but reserving a right of veto for the native Managers. They also expressed the confidence that the new Board would remember that the college "is a Hindu institution for the purpose of cultivating especially English literature and science alone, that the admission of persons likely to injure the respectability and, consequently, to contract the utility of the college will always be strictly prohibited, and that works directed against the character and principles of our countrymen will be also excluded".

The General Committee declined interference in details or a complete association in the general management of the college, and contented itself with appointing its Secretary, Mr. Wilson, as Visitor to the college, expressing the hope that "any recommendation proceeding from the General Committee relative to the conduct of the institution, as expressed through the acting Visitor, will meet with the concurrence of the Managers of the college, unless sufficient reason be submitted in writing ". These arrangements were readily accepted, and subsequently Mr. Wilson was appointed a member of the Committee of Management and elected its Vice-President. About this time Mr. Hare was appointed Superintendent of the School Society's boys at the college and added to the Committee of Management. In May 1826 the Secretary of the Sanskrit College was also put on the Managing Committee.

Dr. Wilson's period as Visitor was marked by great improvements. The hours of study were increased from four to seven, the curriculum was overhauled and enlarged, quarterly and annual examinations were held and the teachers were kept under strict control. Students were attracted from places as far off as Patna, Assam, Vizagapatam, and the numbers rose in 1828 to over 400, so that further admissions had to be suspended for a time.

But there was a limit to the improvement possible. The financial condition always remained unsatisfactory; and in view of the large Government aid that was necessary to put the college on a sound educational basis, the question was seriously raised in 1825 and 1827 whether it would not be wiser for Government to establish a new English College open to all classes of the community and leave the Hindu College to its fate. That college, it is true, received large gifts about this time—a donation of Rs. 50,000 from Raja Buddinath Roy, and two of Rs. 20,000 each from Hurrynath Roy and Kalee Sunker Ghosal—which were used for founding scholarships to allow the best pupils of the first class to prolong their academic career. But, on the other hand, the failure of Messrs. Joseph Barettō & Sons, to whom the subscribed capital of the college had been lent, reduced the endowment to about Rs. 21,000. Fortunately, nothing came out of the scheme for a new English institution.

When the Sanskrit College buildings were completed in 1826, the Hindu College was allowed to occupy both wings. The new edifice was formally opened in May 1827. Although both institutions were housed in the same building, strict precautions were taken to prevent the scholars, the once born and the twice born, from coming too closely into contact with each other. A wall with iron rails on top separated each wing from the central block.

The scholars of the Hindu College had to study two languages, of which English was compulsory, and the second might be Bengali, Sanskrit or Persian. But the teaching of Sanskrit was soon discontinued, and Persian was given up in 1841. The college was originally divided into two departments—Senior and Junior—each composed of four classes, in different rooms. There was, of course, only one Head Master. The first Head Master was Mr. D'Anselem, who occupied the position for some years with great tact and success. One hour each day was devoted to recreation. Every week there was one half-holiday. Corporal punishment was not permitted.

The English books used in those days were such as Tegg's " Book of Knowledge ", Enfield's " Speaker ", Goldsmith's " Geography ", and Murray's " Grammar ". Dr. Wilson urged that the scholars should be made to peruse the best English authors instead of feeding on mere extracts. He pointed out that " the young men did not advance beyond the simple rules of arithmetic and even vulgar fractions were above their attainment ", and recommended the appointment of a Mathematical Instructor. Provision was made for an adequate supply of English books. An extensive " philosophical apparatus ", including scientific books and instruments, had already been sent out by the British India Society in London, and Government sanctioned the appointment of a Science Lecturer. Mr. D. Ross, the Mint Master of Calcutta, was chosen for this post, and he began his lectures in July 1824. But although the course was repeated year after year, little real progress seems to have been made. The teaching of Bengali was improved by the appointment of two additional pundits in 1827. An extensive library was presented by Government also about this time. During these years the study of English made great strides. In 1827 the First Class were reading " Pope's Poems ", " The Vicar of Wakefield ", " Paradise Lost " and " Shakespeare's Plays ". The General Committee in December 1831 wrote: " The consequence has far surpassed expectation. A command of the English language and a familiarity with its literature and science have been acquired to an extent rarely equalled by any schools in Europe. Another generation will probably witness a very material alteration in the notions and feelings of the educated classes of the Hindu community of Calcutta." In 1827 a Drawing Class was opened. The next year suitable provision was at last made for the teaching of Mathematics by the appointment of Dr. Tytler, one of the Presidency Surgeons as Lecturer on English Literature and Mathematics. At the same time, Mr. H. L. V. Derozio was appointed as Master of English Literature and History to the Second and Third Classes. The First Class was under the charge of Mr. Halifax, the Fourth of Mr. Pascal, while Mr. Mollis was Superintendent of the Junior Department.

The appointment of Mr. Derozio was fraught with momentous consequences. He was only 21, but had already made his mark in the world of letters by the publication of poems of no mean order. As a teacher he excited the enthusiasm and gained the affection of his pupils. " Neither before, nor since his day ", says his biographer, " has any teacher, within the walls of any native educational establishment in India, ever exercised such an influence over his pupils. It was not alone in the class-rooms and during the hours of teaching that the genial manner, the buoyant spirit, the ready humour, the wide reading, the readiness to impart knowledge and the patience and courtesy of Derozio won the hearts and the high reverence of his pupils. In the intervals of teaching he was ever ready in conversation to aid his pupils in their studies, to draw them out to give free and full expression to their opinions, on topics naturally arising from the course of their work in their class-rooms; and before the hour at which the usual work of his classes began, and sometimes after the hour for closing the day's duties, Derozio, in addition to the work of the class, in order to broaden and deepen the knowledge of his pupils in the thought and literature of England, gave readings in English literature to as many students of the Hindu College as cared to take advantage of his self-imposed work ". But the influence of Derozio and of English literature was solvent. Bacon, Hume and Tom Paine became the favourite authors of the students. The foundation of the Academic Association in 1828, the first Debating Society of the Hindu College, acted in the same direction. Foremost among the debators was the small band of youths which later earned the nickname of " Young Calcutta ". Among them were such men as Krishnamohan Banerjea, who became a teacher of Hare's School and conducted the paper called the Enquirer, Russick Krishna Mullick, who edited the Bengali periodical Gyananneshan, Dukhina Ranjan Mookherjee, who afterwards earned the personal title of Raja, Ram Gopal Ghose, destined to be a fine orator and a member of the General Committee of Public Instruction from 1848 to 1851. There were two others who, though not pupils of Derozio's classes, came under his influence and added fuel to the fiery discussions of the Academic Association—Tarachand Chukroburttee, the translator of the "Manusamhita" into Bengali and the compiler of the Bengali-English Dictionary, and Chunder Saikur Deb, who wrote a Commentary on the Revenue Laws of Bengal. The members of the Academic Association freely discussed the social and religious customs of the land of their birth; they took no pains to disguise their contempt for conventional Hinduism. "The native Managers of the college" wrote the contemporary Oriental Magazine, "were alarmed at the progress which some of the pupils were making by actually cutting their way through ham and beef and wading to Liberalism through tumblers of beer". Coercive steps were promptly taken. A paper called the Partheon published by the senior scholars under Derozio's guidance, was suppressed by order of Dr. Wilson. The teachers were enjoined to "abstain from any communications on the subject of the Hindu religion with the boys or to suffer any practices inconsistent with the Hindu notions of propriety" on pain of dismissal. The agitation was increased by the announcement of a course of lectures on Natural and Revealed Religion by Duff and other missionaries in Duff's house almost in front of the Hindu College. The Managers forbade attendance at "societies at which political or religious discussions are held". A considerable number of boys were withdrawn. Finally in 1831, it was decided that Derozio's services should be dispensed with. He immediately resigned, and towards the end of the year died of cholera. In the same year D'Anselme also resigned for private reasons and Mr. Speed was chosen to succeed him.

At the suggestion of Dr. Wilson, a Professorship of Law and Political Economy was created in 1831. The first holder was Mr. Theodore Dickens, who was succeeded by Sir John Peter Grant. In 1833 a Rev. Dr. James Adamson was appointed principal Professor in the Hindu College, the Managers having requested Government to help them to obtain the services of teachers who had graduated in British Universities and were "capable of communicating as well as accumulating knowledge"; but they took exception to Adamson on the ground that he was a clergyman, and the appointment was cancelled. In August 1835, the place of Dr. Tytler as Professor of English Literature was filled by Captain David Lester Richardson, who began his career in India as a cadet in the Bengal Army in 1819, but being invalided after ten years of service devoted himself to literary pursuits. He was a poet, an essayist and a journalist; and he proved himself a born teacher. He was long remembered in Bengal as a fine Shakespearean scholar. "I may forget everything about India", said Lord Macaulay to him, "but your reading of Shakespeare, never". The need having been felt more and more of adequate general supervision of the working and discipline of the college, Richardson was appointed Principal in 1839. He took leave in 1842, and on his return was appointed Principal, first of Krishnagar College and then of Hooghly College. He reverted to the Hindu College in 1848; but resigned the next year. In 1857, however, he was again appointed a Professor at the new Presidency College, but was debarred from entering Government service as his name was still on the Invalided Military Pensioners' List. He left India in 1861, and died at Clapham in 1865.

The success of the Hindu College and of similar institutions proved the strength and extent of the demand for an English education and influenced the educational policy of Government, which hitherto had aimed at the cultivation of Oriental literature and science alone. The "Orientalist" party in the General Committee, led by Mr. Shakespear, its President, clung to this policy; but there was now a strong "Anglicist" party which contended for the diffusion of Western learning through the medium of English. The dispute, the history of which is too well known to justify a full account here, was referred to Macaulay, who had become the Law Member of the Supreme Council. His historic Minute, dated the 2nd February 1835, dealt a death blow to the Orientalists; and although Lord Bentinck's Resolution of the 7th March 1835 was softened and modified by Lord Auckland's despatch of the 4th November 1839, it was henceforth the principal aim of Government "to communicate through the means of the English language a complete education in European literature, philosophy and science to the greatest number of students".

The General Committee of Public Instruction was reconstructed in 1835. The number of its members rose to 17, and the Managers of the Hindu College were appointed Honorary Members. A little later, the General Committee appointed a permanent Sub-Committee of six to visit and superintend the college, the first members of which were Sir Edward Ryan, Messrs. H. Shakespear, C. E. Trevelyan and J. Young, Captain Birch and Dr. John Grant.

The college meanwhile prospered. The numbers increased rapidly —in 1839; there were 533 scholars in the Senior School and 372 in the Junior, and a staff of 18 teachers. The accommodation proved insufficient, although the college was now occupying the larger part of the Sanskrit College building. Considerable additions were made in 1843-44.

The fees charged varied from Rs. 5 to Rs. 7. In 1840, six English Junior scholarships and eight Senior scholarships were attached to the Hindu College.

In 1841 certain new rules for the college were drawn up by the Managers and the General Committee in consultation and approved by Government. The capital sum originally subscribed, now reduced to Rs. 23,000, was to be invested, and the interest to be used to found scholarships, called after the names of the first benefactors of the college. The Managers and those who gave a donation of Rs. 5,000 were to be allowed to send free pupils to the college, the total number being limited to 25. The Raja of Burdwan and Babu Prosonno Coomar Tagore were to remain Hereditary Governors. The management was to be in the hands of a Sub-Committee of the General Committee, which was to consist of the existing Managers and two members of the General Committee.

It may be interesting to insert here the books and subjects prescribed by the General Committee's Code for the First or Highest class of the Senior Department at this time:

In 1842 an important change was made in the higher control of education. The General Committee ceased to exist. It was decided that " the institutions founded and supported by Government for the diffusion of education shall be brought more directly under the control of the Government itself, aided by a Council of Education composed of the present members of the General Committee of Public Instruction and such other officers as may from time to time be joined with them ". The functions of the Council of Education were at first advisory, but in 1847 and 1848 its powers were enlarged. The Hindu College was not placed directly under the Council, but, pursuant to the old arrangement, two members, besides the President and the Secretary, were to be included in its Committee of Management.

At this time, the staff of the Hindu College consisted of the Principal, a Professor of Mathematics and a Professor of Surveying; a Head Master, three Assistant Masters and two Pundits for the Senior Department; and a Head Master, eleven Assistants and five Pundits for the Junior. The Professorship of Law had fallen into abeyance, but lectures were revived in that subject in 1841. In 1843 and 1844, courses of lectures in Law were delivered by Mr. J. E. Lyall, the Advocate-General. At the same time, chairs of Natural and Experimental Philosophy and of Civil Engineering were attached by Government to the Hindu College, on condition that the lectures should be open to students of all classes and religions. In 1842, Mr. E. Lodge was appointed Professor of Political Economy, but he left the following year. On Richardson's departure in 1842, Mr. J. Kerr, the Head Master of the Senior Department, became Principal. The post of Head Master of the Junior Department was abolished in 1847; and some years later, the Junior Department was formed into the Hindu School. On the death of David Hare in 1842, the Council of Education took over the School Society's School, which he had superintended and which was known by his name; and it was also eventually attached to the Hindu College.

The Council of Education in 1844 and again in 1848 revised and amended the scholarship rules. Soon after, the number of scholarships attached to the Hindu College was increased; and two new scholarships were endowed by public subscription, one in memory of Mr. W. Wilberforce Bird and the other of Sir Edward Ryan—two men who had been earnest in the cause of education in India. In 1849 the Dwarkanath Tagore scholarship was similarly established. A sum of Rs. 7,000 received as a second dividend on the estate of Messrs. Joseph Barretto & Sons was also used for founding a scholarship called the Vidyalaya Scholarship. Prizes and medals were offered by various persons,—by Lord Hardinge, the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, Mr. Bethune, Mr. Seton Kerr and Raja Dakshinaranjan Mukherjee. In February 1847, Mr. Rees, the Professor of Mathematics, delivered a course of lectures to the First Class on Eclipses, in view of the Solar Eclipse due in October of that year. That year's scholarship examination questions were on Eclipses and Isser Chunder Mitter distinguished himself by calculations and diagrams of the most admirable neatness and accuracy. This pupil also won Lord Hardinge's prize, Mr. Seton Kerr's prize for Political Economy, the Silver Medal for Moral Philosophy, and (in 1844) the Gold Medal for Proficiency in Law.

In 1847 a music class was started, which, under Mr. Harraden, had a great, if temporary, success. So many pupils professed to be anxious to join that Government was induced to grant Rs. 800, with which an instrument was purchased. Mr. Bethune provided the salary of the instructor for a year. But it soon appeared that few pupils were willing to pay anything for instruction in music and the classes were eventually dropped.

In 1847 the rate of fees was revised and increased to Rs. 8 for students in the College Department, Rs. 6 for boys of the Senior School, and Rs. 5 for boys of the Junior School. "The great and increasing estimation in which our institutions are held among the native community and the advisability of not allowing them to discourage and arrest individual enterprise in extending education among the people at large, by affording instruction of the highest order at a cheaper rate than can be obtained in private schools" were the motives professed by the Council of Education for the change.

In 1848 Mr. Kerr and Captain Richardson, then Principal of Hooghly College, exchanged places. But Richardson resigned in 1849 and Mr. E. Lodge became Principal till 1852, when he was succeeded by Mr. Sutcliffe, the Professor of Natural Philosophy. In 1851 a barrister, Mr. Theobold, was appointed to lecture on Law, the classes being open to the Senior students of all Government colleges, and to the public on payment of a fee. Several works on Law were added to the Library; and law was given a more prominent place in the Scholarship Examinations.

It is worth while to note in passing the following figures for the decennium, 1842-1851:—

We have now come almost to the end of the life of the Hindu College in its original form. The events which immediately led to its dissolution or transformation were as follows: The scholars of the Calcutta Madrassah broke out into open rebellion against the authority of their Principal, Dr. Sprenger, in consequence of certain changes he made in the Arabic Department. After a long investigation, Dr. Mouat, the Secretary to the Council of Education, addressed a letter to the Government of Bengal (4th August 1853), in which was outlined not only a scheme for the reform of the Madrassah, but a proposal for a general Metropolitan College, open to all classes and creeds, unlike the sectarian Madrassah and Hindu College. The establishment of a new General College would, however, stifle the Hindu College, and it was better that the Hindu College itself should be changed into a public institution open to all. The Council of Education had accordingly met the Hindu College Managers on the 27th November 1852 to ascertain their sentiments on this project. Babu Prosonno Coomar Tagore, one of the Hereditary Governors, and Babus Russomoy Dutt and Sreekishen Sing attended this meeting. "The first named gentleman ", wrote Dr. Mouat, "was understood to entertain no personal objection to the proposed measure, which he deemed in itself to be a good and proper measure; but he was of opinion that it could not be carried into effect without infringing the terms of the original contract between the Government and the founders of the college, and that he, as a Hereditary Governor, could not give consent to it.

"The other Hereditary Governor is the Maharajah of Burdwan, to whom the Council addressed a letter upon the subject in November 1852. In March 1853, the following reply was received from the Rajah: 'I am afraid our hands are tied down in this respect by the original rules of the above institution which, so far as declaratory of the intentions of its founders, I should be very loth to depart from. As mere trustees too, acting for the subscribers to the original College Fund, now placed under the protecting care of Government, I cannot conceive what right we can have to deviate from the purposes for which that fund was at first created. The names Vidyalaya and Hindoo College seem to me clearly to show that none but Hindoos would be admitted to the privilege of its studentship, and the administrations of Lords Hardinge and Amherst, by placing the college on the side of an institution intended to become the nursery of Sanskrit learning in Calcutta, appear to have recognised those views of its founders. Had this not been the case, I would most unhesitatingly at once vote with the Council of Education. Upon principle, I have always thought that any distinction of caste or religion should never be made in a seminary of education: such distinction is specially unnecessary in a school or college in which no religious doctrines of any kind can be taught.........'

"The above are the only native gentlemen who have anything like vested rights involved in the question. The remainder of the management is elected and liable to removal at the end of each year, but has been allowed tacitly to become a quasi-permanent self-elected body, by the indifference of the original subscribers.

"Of these Managers by far the most active friend of the institution has been Baboo Russomoy Dutt, whose personal connection with its affairs dates from 1822, and who has acted as Secretary, without salary, since 1841. To no one has the college been more indebted than to this able and enlightened gentleman. Baboo Russomoy Dutt is of opinion that the institution should be thrown open to all classes, without distinction, but he objects to any interference with the constitution and prerogatives of the management as settled in 1841.

"Baboo Sree Kishen Sing, an old member of the management, but one who has never taken an active share in the Government of the College, is opposed to the change, which would be, in his opinion, a breach of a contract binding in perpetuity.

"Baboo Ausootosh Dey, an elected member of recent appointment, who has only twice attended the meetings of the management, submitted the following statement of his views on the subject: 'The Hindoo College, when established in the year 1816, was designed for the education of the higher class of the Hindoos exclusively, so that the principle of exclusiveness has been the very foundation of the Hindoo College; an attempt to undermine the foundation would probably bring down the whole fabric itself.........The consequence of throwing open the Hindoo College for the admission of all children without distinction would be the withdrawal of the majority of the present students, who would resort to private schools now in existence under the superintendence of very talented men, perhaps equally proficient with those who fill the Principal's chair in the Government Colleges. In the Mofussil the Hindoo parents, for want of good educational institutions, are obliged to send their children to Government schools, where no distinction of caste and creed is observed; but in Calcutta the Hindoos would not be necessitated to do the same. I cannot, therefore, agree to the proposal of opening the Hindoo College for all castes and creeds, and converting the name of Hindoo College to that of General English College.'

"Baboo Debendranath Tagore, the remaining member, has expressed no opinion upon the subject."

The Council held that although the Government had adopted the Hindu College with its inherent quality of exclusiveness, they had given nothing like a pledge "to maintain that quality of exclusiveness for all future time, or to abstain for ever, whatever changes of circumstances might occur, from all modification of the original constitution of the college". The arrangement entered into by the Government and the founders of the Hindu College was, in the opinion of the Council of Education, only a convention which either party might, upon reasonable notice to the other and upon equitable terms, at any time determine. They advised, therefore, that in case the native Managers withheld their consent to the proposed change, the Government should pay back the money of the original subscribers and re-organise the college as they pleased.

The Government in reply (letter No. 527, dated the 21st October 1853) intimated the consent of the Most Noble the Governor of Bengal to give notice that "the united management and maintenance of the Hindoo College by the Government and the native Managers must cease"; and His Lordship suggested a scheme which, when fully developed, would stand thus:—

"A new general college should be established at Calcutta by the Government, and designated 'The Presidency College,' in order to distinguish it by name from all merely local and private institutions, and in order to give it an official character.

"A fitting edifice should be built for the students entered at this college.

"No student should be admitted there who has not passed, or shall not pass, the standard of the Junior Scholarship.

"The college should be open to all youths of every caste, class or creed.

"The Principal, Professors, etc., of the Senior Department of the present Hindoo College should become the establishment of the Presidency College.

"The Hindoo College, modified by the withdrawal of its Senior Department, should be maintained exclusively for Hindoos. It should consist of two main divisions, namely, the Sanskrit College as at present constituted, and a Junior Department which should be for the reception, as at present, of Hindoo children of the higher classes on a higher fee.

"The Branch School (whose name should be changed, as suggested by the Council, to that of the Colootollah Branch School) should be maintained, as at present, open to all classes and creeds.

"The time, His Lordship doubts not, will come, though it is probably still in the distant future, when the Presidency College, having elevated itself by its reputation and being enriched by endowments and scholarships, will extend its sphere of attraction far beyond the local limits which it is now designed to serve; and when, strengthened by the most distinguished scholars from other cities, and united with the Medical College in all its various departments, as well as with other Professorships of practical science and art whose establishment cannot be long postponed, it will expand itself into something approaching to the dignity and proportion of an Indian University.

"Foreseeing that such a day will come, His Lordship is anxious at this time that all the plans of Government should provide that skilful care may watch over the growth of the new Institution, and that the fullest scope be afforded for its expansion.

* * * * * * * *

"Although His Lordship has proposed to dissolve the connection of the British Government with the native Trustees of the Hindoo College and their education fund, he would not refuse to admit them to a reunion with the Government institutions which are now to be established, provided the native Managers will agree to the following conditions:—

First.—That the management shall be vested wholly and exclusively in the Council of Education by which alone the system of Government education must be controlled.

Secondly.—That the scholarships already founded, together with such further scholarships as their fund of Rs. 30,000 will endow, shall be allotted between the Hindoo College and the Presidency College in such manner as the Council of Education may determine; such scholarships however being open only to students of the Hindoo persuasion.

"The principle of exclusive allotment of scholarships to particular creeds is objectionable in itself; but under the peculiar circumstances of the case, His Lordship would not object to make this concession."

A copy of the Government letter was transmitted by the Council of Education to the Hereditary Governors and Managers of the Hindu College with a request to state their views and wishes upon the terms offered by His Lordship. The Maharaja of Burdwan was agreeable to these terms, and resigned the entire management of the college on its new footing and the scholarships into the hands of the Council of Education. Babu Prosonno Coomar Tagore, with the concurrence of his brother, transferred all the rights and privileges they possessed in the institution and its funds to the Government; but he expressed a hope that the public-spirited conduct of the original founders of the college might be permanently recorded in "some prominent memorial in the remodelled seminary, by which their names might be associated with the college through every period of its existence, and be embalmed in the grateful recollection of future generations".

Of the elective members, Babu Russomoy Dutt expressed his willingness to make over the college to the Council of Education immediately and unconditionally; Babu Asutosh Dey regretted the organic changes proposed to be introduced, and retired from the management, as he had no opinion to offer on the subject; Babu Debendranath Tagore and Babu Sree Kishen Sing expressed no opinion whatsoever.

The Hindu College management had their last meeting on the 11th January 1854: "Baboo Russomoy Dutt brought to the notice of the meeting that Baboo Prosonno Coomar Tagore had intimated, upon receiving notice of the present meeting, that he conceived he had surrendered his place in the management when he placed his rights as Hereditary Governor at the disposal of the Government, and did not intend to take any further part in the management, and that no other native member of the management was in the habit of attending the meetings; whereupon, it was, on the suggestion of Baboo Russomoy Dutt, resolved, that the functions of the Hindoo College management shall henceforth cease, and that the Principal be directed to take charge of the office, reporting to the Council of Education directly." In conformity with the terms of this Resolution, Babu Russomoy Dutt made over charge of the office of Secretary on the 1st February 1854, and he was thereupon appointed a member of the Council of Education.

In a letter, No. 598, dated the 10th March 1854, the Council of Education reported the above events to the Government, and suggested the perpetuation of the memory of the founders by the institution of scholarships as well as "by the erection of a marble tablet in a prominent position in the present Hindoo College building, on which should be inscribed a brief history of the origin of the college, with the names of those who aided in its formation. Should any corresponding tablets be erected in the new Presidency College building, perhaps the sense felt of the true value of the services done by those Hindoo gentlemen to the cause of education in Bengal, might be expressed becomingly, by recording upon a tablet in the new building to which all classes will have access, the fact that the way for the foundation of the General Presidency College in 1854 had been first opened by the founders of the Hindoo College in 1816".

The Council of Education contemplated the union of the existing Medical College with the projected Presidency College, and the creation of a school of Law and a school of Civil Engineering, so that the complete institution would really be a University, with power to grant diplomas to successful students. The Council proposed to close the Hindu College at the end of the current session, on the 15th April 1854, and on the same day to announce the constitution of the Presidency College and the Hindu School, which were to open on the 15th June 1854. The Government, however, was of opinion that it should wait for the approval of the Hon'ble Court before "the formal declaration of the new constitution of the college". But a part of the change was carried into effect forthwith. The scholars of the College Department of the Hindu College were transferred to the Presidency College and new admissions were made from the Senior School and from other Government and private schools. The number of scholars enrolled was 101, of which all, except two (Muhammadans), were Hindus.

Shortly afterwards, the famous Despatch of the Court of Directors, of the 19th July 1854 (commonly known as Sir Charles Wood's Despatch), came, which clearly laid down the educational policy of the Government of India. Agreeably to it, the Education Department was reconstituted; the Council of Education ceased to exist; and a new Department of Public Instruction was inaugurated with a Director at its head. The despatch also sanctioned the institution of Universities in the Presidency towns of India.

This despatch was closely followed by another, dated the 18th September 1854, sanctioning the establishment of the Presidency College of Calcutta. The Hon'ble Court of Directors approved the main features of the proposals of the Council of Education. In order, however, that the scheme might harmonise with the directions contained in their general despatch of the 19th July, the Court of Directors desired that the following points should be borne in mind:—

"The building of the Presidency College should be so arranged as to afford space for such buildings or apartments as may be required for the transaction of the business of the Calcutta University and for holding the University Examinations.

"The engineering, law and other professorships attached to the college will obviate the necessity of founding such professorships in connexion with the University, and the functions of the latter will be confined to its normal object, viz., that of examining candidates and conferring degrees and distinctions.

"The Presidency College might hold examinations, confer prizes, make as public as possible the names of its distinguished pupils, and take any other means which may seem advisable to stimulate their exertions and reward their success. But the power of granting diplomas or degrees should be confined to the University so that students from the Presidency College shall have no advantage, as regards examinations for degrees and distinctions, over those belonging to the other institutions affiliated to the University.

"No addition to the funds which have hitherto been applied to scholarships at the Hindoo College would seem, for the present at least, to be necessary for instituting scholarships at the Presidency College, except those which may be open to students from other institutions, and those which may be annexed to the departments of medicine and civil engineering."

Thus, on the 15th June 1855, the Presidency College was formally established. The Hindoo College had done a great work. It had been the pioneer in the task of imparting modern culture to Bengal; it had ably trained many thousands and many generations of young men; it had drawn the attention of Government to the importance and the possibilities of education; it had indirectly, but powerfully, moulded the educational policy of Government. But its work was done. The generosity that had originally called it into being proved inadequate to sustain its enlarging needs; its sectarian basis was more and more out of keeping with the progressive spirit of the times. And so it was compelled to rely, in even larger measure, on the financial support of Government, and finally to suffer evolution into a completely Government institution,—a change which may have been, in some respects, unfortunate, but which, in the circumstances, was inevitable.

CHAPTER II.

Presidency College, 1855-1926.

. Soon after the formation of the Department of Public Instruction, the Director circularized (circulars Nos. 1753 to 1757, dated the 20th July 1856) that students of the College Department should thenceforward be designated as " of 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Year, according to their standing, and that they be not in future distinguished by Classes ". In the opening year of the newly organised Presidency College (1855-1856), the General Branch contained 50 students in the 1st Year Class, 32 in the 2nd Year, 7 in the 3rd Year and 5 in the 4th Year; the Law Branch, which was now placed on a separate footing, was composed of 25 students in the 1st Year Class, 4 in the 2nd Year and 9 in the 3rd Year. Out of the total of 132 students, 82 were paying students, 43 scholarship-holders and 7 free pupils. Five of these students were Christians; the remainder were Hindus. Four Muhammadan Junior scholars were brought over from the Madrassah, but they did not remain long.

The 2nd Year and 4th Year-students were examined at the Town Hall by the Board of Examiners appointed by the Director of Public Instruction—the former for Senior scholarships and the latter for Honours. The 1st and 3rd Year students were at the same time examined at the College Theatre by the officers of the college. In the Honours Examination of 1856, Bholanath Paul was awarded a medal for proficiency in Natural Philosophy and another in Mental and Moral Science, while Dwarkanath Chuckerburtty got a medal for proficiency in Literature. Senior scholarships were awarded to several students of the General Branch.

The year 1855, approximately, initiates a period of transition in the educational history of Bengal. At about the same time as the opening of the Presidency College, a Committee was appointed by the Supreme Government to draw up a scheme for a University for the purpose of holding examinations and conferring degrees and honours. The scheme matured in 1856; and on the completion of their labours, the Calcutta University Committee were thanked by the Governor-General in Council in a Notification, dated the 12th December 1856. The first Entrance Examination of the University was held in March 1857, when 23 Presidency College students passed out successfully, 22 having been placed in the First Division and only one in the Second. Their names are given below:—

(1) Banerji, Dwarkanath.
(2) Banerji, Nilmoni.
(3) Basu, Bireswar.
(4) Basu, Debendranarayan.
(5) Basu, Jadunath.

The Entrance Examination, it should be observed, formed no part of the course of studies pursued at the college; but the students went up for the examination self-prepared. Their successors next year did the same. But from 1859, students were admitted to the college on producing a certificate of having passed the University Entrance Examination, or on passing an examination at the college of the same nature as that for University Entrance candidates.

In the first B. A. Examination of the Calcutta University, which was held in April 1858, 6 students of Presidency College competed. Four of them " were from the 4th or Final Year of the General Department, and two were from the Final or 3rd Year of the Law Department; and notwithstanding the difficulty of the questions set by the University Examiners ", two came out successful in the Second Division. They were:—

(1) Bankim Chandra Chatterji, Law Department.
(2) Jadunath Basu, General Department.

Until the studies for a University degree in Law became standardized, the Law Department continued on a rather uncertain footing. Law students were required, as part of their course, to attend Lectures on Logic, Political Economy, Moral Philosophy and Mental Philosophy. As the Sudder Court had expressed their willingness to accept a college certificate as equivalent to a certificate of having passed the examination in Law prescribed for candidates for Munsifships and Sudder Pleaderships, the number of Law students perceptibly increased since 1856. This practice was, however abolished in 1860, and was substituted by the University examinations for the degrees of Licentiate and Bachelor of Law.

There were two Professors in charge of the Law Department—a Professor of Roman Civil Law and General Jurisprudence on Rs. 400 a month, and a Professor of Municipal Law drawing a salary of Rs. 300 per month; they delivered ten lectures a week.

In a letter, dated the 7th January 1861, the Director of Public Instruction appointed a Committee consisting of the Principal and the two Professors of Law " to reconsider the scheme of instruction in the Law Classes of the Presidency College, with a view to bringing the Collegiate course into harmony with the requirements of the University ". They systematized the courses of lectures to be delivered, and made a judicious allotment of lectures between the two Professors.

In 1856-1857, that is, during the second year of its new life, Presidency College had 99 students in the 1st Year, 40 in the 2nd Year and 5 in the 3rd Year; while the 4th Year, which could boast only of a couple of students, remained practically empty for many months during the latter part of the session. The falling off in the number was mainly due to the abolition of the Engineering Classes and the opening of a separate Civil Engineering College in the Writers' Buildings on the 24th November 1856. The Gymnastic Class, which had been opened a few years before, was discontinued this year on account of the difficulty in finding a suitable hour during the hot and rainy seasons. It was decided to revive this Class in winter; but the idea had to be given up as the teacher (M. Montigny) left Calcutta before that season arrived.

Besides the regular students mentioned above, there were some "out-students" who attended detached courses of lectures; their number in 1857 was 37. The tuition fees having been increased from Rs. 5 to Rs. 10 a month, in the session of 1858-1859, there was a marked diminution in the number of applicants for admission to the General Department. The diminution, however, was only temporary. The next year (1859-1860) saw not only a decided increase in the total number of students, but also the admission of another class of pupils called "privileged out-students," who paid Rs. 10 a month in the General Department and were entitled to all the privileges of the Law Department on paying an additional fee of Rs. 25 annually for attending the course of lectures delivered by each of the Professors. It would thus appear that Presidency College, in spite of the heavy tuition fees it charged, was eagerly resorted to by a large number of students. The reason is succinctly put down by Principal Sutcliffe in his Report for 1858-1859: "Not only does the Presidency College impart a higher order of education than any private or missionary institutions, which are intended for the education of the natives, but its fees are considerably higher. In fact, education in the one commences at the point where it is generally discontinued in the other."

In 1855 the English Senior scholarships of Rs. 30 and Rs. 40 a month, which were attached to Presidency College, were reduced in value to Rs. 25, and the saving thus effected was applied to the creation of additional Junior scholarships. Of the scholarships of the old Hindu College, one-half was made available for Hindu students of private schools, while the other half was reserved for those educated at Hindu School. As two of the best Junior scholars of every mufassal college and the best from every zillah school were induced annually to prosecute their studies at Presidency College, by reason of the high-valued scholarships available here, it was gratifying to note that this institution considerably outdistanced the other colleges within a short period. In 1860 the Senior scholars of all mufassal colleges were required to proceed to Presidency College for study. It has been observed already that the Senior scholarships were awarded after a special examination held at the close of the college session (in December). This examination was superseded in 1862 by the first Examination in Arts of the Calcutta University, in pursuance of the Director of Public Instruction's circulars Nos. 1383 to 1387, dated the 7th August 1860. New Scholarship Rules were also framed about this time.

In 1861 scholarship-holders were deprived of the privilege, which they had been hitherto enjoying, of receiving free tuition in addition to their stipends. Junior scholars were henceforth required to pay a monthly fee of Rs. 5, and Senior scholars, Rs. 10, "with the exception of those coming from Krishnagar and Berhampore Colleges" who paid only a fee of Rs. 5 a month. A system of scholarships was inaugurated in 1862 for Presidency College graduates wishing to go up for the higher degree. "The foundation funds of the old Hindu College form the source of income for these scholarships. One of them (the Burdwan Scholarship) bears the name of the family from whose liberality it has been established, the others have been established from the funds collected by public subscription to commemorate the services and personal qualities of the distinguished individuals whose names they bear." They were designated as follows, and were tenable by graduates for one year after taking the B. A. degree:—

	Per month.
	Rs.
Raja of Burdwan Scholarship	50
Dwarkanath Tagore Scholarship	50
Bird Scholarship	40
Ryan Scholarship	40

Besides these, three more graduate scholarships at the rate of Rs. 30 a month were available; they were called "Hindu College Scholarships". The annual income of Rs. 4,132, which was derived from the above funds, was utilised for ten scholarships in 1863. The Director of Public Instruction was authorized by Government Order No. 1137, dated the 12th March 1863, to award these scholarships without reference to Government.

Simultaneously with the re-organization of the college, a Committee was appointed to draw up a plan for a suitable building. The Committee submitted a preliminary report in 1856; and the Governor-General in Council having selected a plot of land, a part of it was immediately purchased. The site was, however, abandoned later on, and a new site chosen, because a sum of Rs. 8 lakhs was demanded as the price of only a portion of the former. The sepoys broke out in mutiny soon after; and the Supreme Government ordered the stoppage of "all public works, with the exception of military works and such others as were indispensably necessary". But the misfortune did not end here; the college building was soon converted into a hospital for the Military Department. The Principal reported in 1860 that a building was urgently required for locating all the Classes in one place. "At present", he went on, "one portion is accommodated in the Hindu College together with two other institutions, and the other portion is located in the house opposite the college gate [meaning the house which was formerly occupied by the Principal of the Hindu College]; and there is not in either building a suitable room for lectures on Natural Philosophy of an experimental character." This continued occupation of the college premises by a foreign element caused much inconvenience, and the Principal (Mr. Sutcliffe) apprehending that "the Medical authorities will not vacate so convenient a building" suggested that the Government should peremptorily require them to do so.

Since 1860 the number of pupils appears to have increased steadily. The flow of students from all parts of the country was so great in 1862 that the 1st Year Class, which enrolled 103 students, had to be divided into two sections. In the 2nd Year Class there were 87 pupils; it seemed urgently necessary to increase the staff and divide the 2nd Year also into sections. As compared with the preceding year, there was altogether an increase of 62 pupils in the General Department and of 21 in the Law Department. In the words of the Officiating Principal, Mr. Grapel, "an instructive staff which was sufficient in 1855 when the college was established, and the number of students was 123, is utterly insufficient to meet the requirements of an institution whose numbers swelling year by year, have, inclusive of the Law Department, reached a present total of 413 with a certainty of yet greater growth hereafter". The Principal observed in 1863 that there was not room enough to hold the increasing number of students without undesirable congestion. In the main building were situated the Library, one class-room and the Principal's room; in a house on the other side of the street, four Classes were held; in the detached theatre the unwieldy 2nd Year Class was placed. Although the Hindu School was removed from the western wing of the main building which was now, with the exception of only 1 room, used for the purposes of the college, Professors were "put to much inconvenience from having to go from house to house in quest of their respective Classes".

In 1864 the admissions to the 1st Year Class being too numerous, it was divided into three sections. The Teaching Staff of this period consisted of six Professors, five Assistant Professors and two Lecturers, besides the Principal. Two additional Assistant Lecturers were, therefore, appointed to cope with the increased volume of work. The 2nd Year Class had to be divided into two sections; and "to make adequate provision for the instruction of the additional 2nd Year Class in English Studies, an extra Assistant Professor on Rs. 500 a month was applied for, and Lieutenant E. R. Ives, a graduate of Oxford, was appointed". The scramble for admission to Presidency College was somewhat reduced in 1865, when B.A. Classes and Law Lectures were provided for in the mufassal colleges.

The Civil Engineering College, which had been in operation as a separate institution since 1856, was abolished as such in November 1864, and its Classes formed a separate department of Presidency College. Arrangements for the transfer of the entire establishment and Classes to the building occupied by Presidency College had, however, to be postponed till the close of the official year 1864-1865. The courses of Civil Engineering study covered a period of three years. Candidates for admission to these Classes must have passed the University Entrance Examination. The tuition fee was fixed at Rs. 5 a month, and an admission fee of Rs. 10 was charged. Two scholarships of Rs. 10 a month were founded in memory of the late Major-General Forbes. The practical training of the students was provided for by establishing five Government scholarships of Rs. 50 a month, tenable for two years by students who had passed the University Examination for a Licence or Bachelorship in Civil Engineering.

For the instruction of these Classes the following additional staff was provided, viz., one Professor and an Assistant Professor of Engineering, one Professor of Mathematics and one teacher of Drawing. The Professor of Physical Sciences in the General Department (Mr. Blanford) took upon himself the task of delivering lectures to the new Classes in his own subject.

In the year 1866 the tuition fee in the General Department was raised from Rs. 10 to Rs. 12 a month, and in the Law Department from Rs. 5 to Rs. 10. The action of the Education Department was supported by the Lieutenant-Governor because, in His Honour's estimation, the college was "already very full, if not overfull; it is very costly, and education thereat is much prized"; and the Government of India signified their approval in a letter No. 1695, dated the 9th June 1866

The higher rate of fees came into operation at the beginning of the session of 1866-1867; "it undoubtedly prevented many students from joining the college who would otherwise have done so". Foundation scholars were required from this year to pay the full amount of the ordinary college fee. Test examinations were introduced in this session by Mr. Sutcliffe, in order to save the University much trouble and in the belief that it would make it possible to maintain stricter discipline in the college.

The recorded figures for Law students during this period are rather striking. They prove beyond doubt that even so long ago as 1865 an eagerness for the pursuit of the legal profession was clearly in evidence among Bengali students. "In the history of education in Bengal", observed Principal Sutcliffe, "there is nothing more remarkable than the growth of these [the Law] Classes. In this college the number of students has increased from 103 to 211 in the course of three years. There are already symptoms of a superfluity of lawyers."

The Civil Engineering Department, on the other hand, held out little promise of future expansion. Not only so; in view of the comparative paucity of students, the Principal in 1868 expressed the opinion that the department was "likely to be maintained if the 2nd Year students remain to prosecute their studies for the University Licence instead of the certificates of qualification for employment in the Department of Public Works". But efforts to place the Civil Engineering Department on an efficient footing were not lacking. The staff was strengthened in 1869 by the appointment of two Assistant Professors from England. The Government having notified that an examination would be held in February 1872 for admitting recruits in the Subordinate Executive Service and that a certain amount of Engineering and Surveying knowledge would be demanded of the candidates, a special Class was opened in the Engineering Department on the 1st November 1871 for coaching candidates who would wish to have a regular training. This class lasted till the proposed examination took place. It was revived in June 1872 for training the examinees of the following year.

The General Department bore signs of improvement in every respect. In April 1867 Babu Peary Churn Sarkar, Head Master of Hare School, was promoted to a fourth grade Professorship at Presidency College; and within a short time he was found to be an ideal Professor. It was contemplated about this time to appoint a Professor of Latin and Comparative Grammar. The proposal, however, fell through, as the Finance Department suggested that the remuneration of the Professor should be obtained from special fees realized from students attending these lectures.

The college was now fast gaining in numbers. It proved to be the nursery of the best men in the University. For several years all the University scholarships open to free competition were carried off by the students of Presidency College. A Government scholarship of £200 per annum tenable in England having been instituted in 1869, a competitive examination was conducted by examiners appointed by the Calcutta University. The scholarship was won by Anandaram Baruya, a student of this college. The same year, Ananda Mohan Bose, an M. A. of Presidency College, was elected Premchand Roychand student. In 1870, Sarada Charan Mitra, Eshan scholar from this college, achieved the unique distinction of being the first graduate, since the establishment of the University, who successfully presented himself for Honours the same year as he had graduated; he chose English as the subject for examination, and was placed in the Second Class. The next year (1871), Rashbihari Ghose, a graduate in Law from this college, went up for Honours in Law, and was successful.

As there seemed every prospect of the number of .applicants for admission in the college increasing beyond its capacity in the near future, the Principal in 1868 expressed a desire that the rolls should not contain more than 300 students in the Under-graduate Classes. The monthly fee payable by Junior scholars was raised from Rs. 5 to Rs. 6 in January 1869, in accordance with circular No. 1 of the Director of Public Instruction, dated the 17th January 1868; it was further increased to Rs. 10 three years later (1872). This step was partly responsible for the slight decrease in the total number of students in the session 1872-1873. During this session there were 385 pupils on the rolls, whereas two years before (that is, in 1870-1871) the aggregate had come up to 401, an aggregate "larger than in any former year since the establishment of the college". But the diminution in numbers was only temporary. Besides the traditional popularity of the college (since the old Hindu College days) as the very best institution in the country, another potent factor was at work. The Krishnagar and Berhampore Colleges were reduced to the status of intermediate institutions in 1872: many mufassal boys were thereby compelled to prosecute their studies in Calcutta; and the promising and the well-to-do naturally got themselves admitted to the premier college of the province.

But the crucial problem remained still unsolved. The authorities of Presidency College were at a loss for means to provide sufficient seats for the annually increasing number of candidates for admission. The project of providing the college with a suitable edifice, as contemplated in 1855, took indeed a long time in taking shape. The Principal did his best to deal with the problem in every possible way, and, as a temporary measure, drew up in 1868 a plan for enlarging the building. The proposed additions were made in 1869, and excellent class-rooms were assigned to the Engineering students. The plan, however, appeared to have been only a makeshift. In less than two years' time, the necessity for a still larger number of rooms was again keenly felt. The only solution of the problem of accommodation lay unmistakably in the erection of a new and separate building for the institution. In the plans that had been prepared at different times, the estimated expenditure was found unfortunately too large to admit of any active measures being taken.

It has been mentioned before that the idea of purchasing the site that was selected in 1855 had to be abandoned on account of the extravagant price demanded by the owners. But there was already in the possession of Government a piece of land (bought in 1842 or thereabouts) where the quarters of the Principal of the Hindu College were situated. It formed part of the site occupied at present by Presidency College. In the lower apartments of the Principal's house, the Hindu College patshalla was held. The Hare School (then called the Colootolah Branch School, and, since 1867, the Hare School) having been asked peremptorily to vacate its hired house (the house now occupied by the Municipal Office of District No. II), was shifted temporarily to the patshalla premises in 1843, and continued to hold its classes there till 1847, when a new building, containing accommodation for 500 boys, was constructed for its reception on the spare block attached to the patshalla house. It occupied the very plot where the Chemical Laboratory block on the side of Bhawani Charan Dutt Lane is now situated. Two rooms were subsequently added to this new building. On the removal of the Hare School in 1872 to the building it now occupies, the Engineering Classes of Presidency College were removed to the old Hare School building, after necessary alterations and repairs; and a few additional class-rooms were thereby made available for the use of the General Department. But the Professors were extremely inconvenienced by reason of the 3rd and 4th Year Classes being located in different buildings. The plight of the Hindu School was very pitiable; for want of sufficient accommodation, seven Classes "were held in a hall wherein, in the old days of the Hindu College, only four Classes were taught".

In the meantime, in response to the repeated representations of the Principal, the Government had acquired three plots of land, measuring 5 bighas, 13 kathas, 13 chhataks and 33 square feet, by Declaration No. 309, dated the 5th September 1865, under the provisions of Act VI of 1857, at a cost of Rs. 98,344-2 as.-1 pie. Some two years later, by Declaration No. 55, dated the 12th February 1867, an adjoining land measuring 1 bigha, 3 kathas, 1 chhatak and 3 square feet was acquired at a cost of Rs. 17,193-15 as.-1½ pies. These lands, it appears, "comprised holdings 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 89, 90, 91, 93, 95, 96, 97, 99, 101, 102, 103, 131, 132, 132/1, 139, 140, 141, 144, 145, 146 and 125 [152?] of Block IX, North Division". The whole plot of this Government land was situated next to the Principal's house. Mr. Sutcliffe submitted to the Chief Engineer, in 1870, a plan for the erection of a building for Presidency College on the land lying unused to the north of the new Hare School. He hoped that it would cost only Rs. 2 or 2½ lakhs, and invited an early discussion of the plan and the preparation of estimates.

The Calcutta University opened several avenues for the B. A. degree in 1872, leaving to the candidates the option of selecting the combination of subjects in which they might like to offer themselves for examination. The limited class accommodation at Presidency College made it more difficult than ever to carry on a system of Optional Classes in a satisfactory manner. Fortunately, a way out of the tangle was at last in sight. The plan of a building that the Principal had submitted in 1870 was favourably considered, and the erection of a suitable building at an estimated cost of Rs. 3 lakhs was sanctioned by the Government. The foundation stone was laid by Lord Northbrook in 1872. An additional piece of land measuring 18 kathas, 8 chhataks and 15 square feet was acquired at a cost of Rs. 9,883-0 as.-9 pies under a Declaration published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 11th February 1874; and the new edifice was opened on the 31st March 1874 by the then Lieutenant-Governor, Sir George Campbell, in the presence of His Excellency the Viceroy.

To the Principal this was a great relief. "For twenty years", he wrote in his annual report of 1873-1874, "the work of the college has been carried on under disadvantages which those only can fully appreciate whose duties required daily attendance in rooms miserably small and ill-adapted for classes of any kind in a Bengal climate. The 3rd and 4th Year Classes of the General Department and all the Engineering Classes were transferred to the new building immediately after the opening ceremony, and the sensible relief which the spacious class-rooms afford is spoken of gratefully both by Professors and students. Before the end of April all the Classes will be located in the new building, and it is satisfactory to be able to say that not only is there ample accommodation for all departments of the college as they now exist, but that there is room to spare for a very large extension. The liberality of the Government in everything connected with the building has been unbounded, and the wish expressed by the founder, that the college should have a fitting edifice built for the accommodation of its students, has been most completely fulfilled." The finishing touch was given to the dignity of the edifice by Babu Nuffer Chandra Pal Chaudhuri, who provided it with a turret clock, at a cost of nearly Rs. 5,000, soon after its opening.

The Lieutenant-Governor (Sir George Campbell) took lively interest in the affairs of the student community. Anxious to provide sufficient facilities for the teaching of the Physical and Natural Sciences, with especial reference to Agriculture, he persuaded the Secretary of State for India to send out Mr. (afterwards, Sir) Alexander Pedler, as Professor of Chemistry at Presidency College in 1873. As the college building was then under construction, and the plan was intended to provide it with well-arranged Chemical Laboratories with adequate fittings and apartments for lectures in Experimental Physics, Mr. Pedler was ordered by the Secretary of State to purchase a considerable supply of chemical apparatus before he left the British Isles. Thus furnished with the most modern paraphernalia of Science Teaching, Presidency College began to be attended in increasing numbers by students of Science subjects. In the session of 1872-1873 the election of the Science course for the B. A. degree was already very pronounced among its alumni; and the attractiveness of this course was conclusively proved by 191 out of 267 students choosing this course during the next session. To Professor Pedler belongs the credit of having started the Practical Chemistry Classes in the College, as it was at his instance that 20 small sets of chemical apparatus were procured in March 1875. With the following session, one of these sets was handed over to each student at the beginning of his course, against a deposit of Rs. 20 to cover loss and breakage. "The large room on the south-west of the building was partially fitted up as a practical class-room." In order to assist the aided and other private colleges in Calcutta "which may not be able to supply the means of instruction in the Experimental Sciences", the Director of Public Instruction ordered in 1873 that "their students might be allowed to attend courses of lectures in these branches at the Presidency College at a reduced fee". In consequence of this arrangement, 13 outsiders appear to have been attending this college in the session 1873-1874, 12 of them belonging to the Cathedral Mission College, who attended the Physics and Chemistry Classes.

In 1879 a regular Gymnastic Class was opened and was attended by a handful of students who not only went through the ordinary gymnastic course, but also played football and cricket. Under the superintendence of Professor Bipin Vihary Gupta, a Cricket and Football Club was organised by students in 1891, and a suitable plot of ground on the maidan was granted for their use, on an application being made to the Commissioner of Police. The same year the gymnastic exercises, which were optional, were made compulsory for the students of the 1st Year Class for three days in the week, unless their parents and guardians assigned sufficient reasons for their exemption.

From what has been said above it would appear the Presidency College had by this time become a miniature teaching University and imparted instruction not only in Arts and Science, but also in Law and Engineering. The staff of the college was increased from time to time, as necessity demanded. When the new building was opened, the Teaching Staff was composed of—

It has been observed before that the attendance at the Civil Engineering Classes had become meagre. It became apparent afterwards that the number of admissions in this department was gradually declining. In January 1878, a Committee had been appointed by Government to consider " the question of the establishment of a practical training institution for Engineers at Calcutta in connection with the workshops of the Public Works Department ". The Committee recommended a scheme which provided for the training—both theoretical and practical—of mechanical as well as civil engineers, and also of their subordinate officers. Their recommendations were accepted, and a Government Engineering College was established at Howrah "in the building formerly known as Bishop's College". Its session started on the 5th April 1880. Immediately after the close of the session 1879-1880 the students and teachers of the Civil Engineering Department of Presidency College were transferred to the newly established Engineering College.

It was now the turn of the Law Classes to be closed down. Students who had passed the F. A. Examination were eligible for admission to the Law Department. The course of study extended over three years. The University required that, of the full course of three years, two must be pursued after the students had taken the B. A. degree; hence, students commonly joined the Law Classes when they were in the 4th Year Class. Now, the Metropolitan Institution was affiliated in Law in 1882 and the City College in 1883; in both these colleges lower fees were charged. The number of Law students of this college, therefore, fell off suddenly. From 121 in 1882, and 11 on the 31st March 1883, it fell to 6 on the 31st March 1884. "In pursuance of the accepted policy of closing Government institutions whenever private agency is found capable of doing the work", the Law Department was abolished on the 1st January 1885.

By an order of the Government, the College Department of the Calcutta Madrassah was abolished in July 1888; but the students of that department were allowed to attend lectures at Presidency College on payment of a fee, at the Madrassah rate, of Rs. 2 a month. These students continued to be members of the Madrassah and subject to the discipline of that institution as its resident students. As a compensation for the valuable privilege enjoyed by its pupils, the Principal of the Madrassah was required to lecture at Presidency College. The Muhammadan students of Presidency College had two-thirds of their fees paid out of the Mohsin Fund. The students of Sanskrit College also, after they had passed the F. A. Examination, were allowed to read their English subjects for the B.A. degree at Presidency College. But they were required to "pay the full fee of Rs. 12 or half-fees according as they were scholarship-holders or not".

About this time the necessity of increasing the staff became more and more pressing. In July 1888 the number on the rolls of the College exceeded 500—"a greater strength than it has ever before known", wrote the Director of Public Instruction. "The demands made by the various courses of the University upon a limited educational staff", he continued, "have much increased of late years; and if in accordance with the present policy the strength of the Presidency College professoriate be maintained at such a level as to meet all requirements,... students will flock to its class-rooms in such numbers as to more than repay the additional cost involved". The policy of the department was clear and unambiguous: Presidency College must be strengthened, even though in so doing the staff of the less important Government colleges had to be weakened. In accordance with this policy the staff was "strengthened to the full requirements of the college".

Many of the science subjects prescribed by the University for the B.A. degree were not taught in other colleges in Bengal; in fact, in no college in this province was a complete course of instruction given in them. As Presidency College took the lead, on account of the variety of subjects it taught, the University, in 1888, suggested to the Government of Bengal the desirability of enlarging its curriculum by the inclusion of Geology, Physiology and Botany. The Director of Public Instruction endorsed the proposal, not only because it would enable the college to realise to a greater extent its original ideal of a teaching University, but also because recent experience showed that "in proportion as the staff of the Presidency College is strengthened its numbers and its fee-receipts increase". "As a result of recent additions made to the staff", observed the Director, "the cost of the college had increased from Rs. 77,322 in 1887-1888 to Rs. 79,137 in 1888-1889"; but the fee-receipts had also risen from Rs. 48,646 to Rs. 72,546. The proposed addition of the Science subjects was all the more earnestly advocated, inasmuch as the policy of the day was "the concentration of higher educational effort in the Presidency College, and the gradual retirement of Government from outlying colleges, where private enterprise may in time be trusted to take up the work".

In consequence of the recommendations mentioned above, a chair of Geology was attached to the college in 1892 which Mr. (afterwards, Sir) Thomas Holland came to fill temporarily on the 7th July. A system of student-assistants was introduced, at the Lecturer's suggestion, to help in the work of demonstration. A Demonstrator of Geology, (Babu Hem Chandra Dasgupta) was appointed in 1903, and within the next two years the stipends of the student-assistants were increased. In 1906 there were 45 students studying the subject.

From a reference to the Calcutta University Calendar it will appear that one student (Bhupendra Sri Ghosh) graduated from Presidency College in 1888 with Honours in Biology, although no arrangement had yet been made for a systematic teaching of this subject. The Biological Class was started with six students in September 1900, with Mr. S. C. Mahalanobis as the first Professor. The department originally consisted of Physiology and Botany. In five years (that is, during the session 1906-1907) the Biological Class contained 102 students, out of whom 45 were studying Physiology and 57 Botany.

Corporate life in the college is of comparatively recent growth. The Gymnastic Classes helped a little in fostering and maintaining this spirit. To Sir Charles Elliot, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal (1890-1895), belongs the credit of having inaugurated in 1892 the "Annual Speech Day" which was celebrated with dramatic performances and recitations. Sir Charles and Lady Elliot entertained the B.A. students at two parties during the year—one at Belvedere and the other on the river. For three successive years (1892 to 1894) His Honour, who used to be present on the Speech Day, presented medals for the best oration and essay; and a grant of Rs. 125 was made for this purpose by his Government. A spirit of comradeship among students being thus encouraged, athletic clubs which hitherto rested on an unstable basis came gradually to stay. In 1894 an Athletic Club was attached to the college; the Government granted annually the same amount of money as the students raised by subscription from amongst themselves during the year. Students of the 1st Year Class were thereafter (1897) required to attend the Gymnastic Class; only those who were physically unfit or had to come from a great distance were exempted. A subscription of 2 annas per month (or Re. 1 annas 8 annually) to the Athletic Club was also made compulsory for all students. They began to realise the advantages of physical education; and with the consistent progress of the Athletic Club, it was possible in five years' time to purchase 2 large tents with the accumulated funds. On the 15th March 1900, the Athletic Sports of the college were held for the first time on the Caledonian ground, opposite the Eden Gardens. Sir John Woobdurn, the then Lieutenant-Governor, was present on the occasion, and Lady Woodburn gave away the prizes. The Annual Speech Day was also revived during this session (1899-1900). His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor attended the performance of "Hamlet" by the students and staff, and made a donation of Rs. 100 to the College Dramatic Fund.

Another useful institution had, however, been lacking for a long time. Up till 1895 Presidency College had not provided a separate hostel for its students. That year Government took over the Eden Hindu Hostel (originally founded by public subscription, the Raja of Mahisadal being the principal donor), which "was erected on the Presidency College surplus lands". The compound was enlarged by two plots of lands (which originally belonged to Prem Lal Dutt), measuring 10 kathas, 10 chhataks and 27 square feet on the east, and 17 kathas, 14 chhataks and 39 square feet on the south. A new 3-storeyed wing was added to the building in 1896; and the hostel was placed under the control of the Principal for the exclusive accommodation of the students of Presidency College, and the attached Hare and Hindu Schools. All students who did not live with their bonâ fide guardians were required henceforth to put up in this hostel.

In 1904 the Education Department inaugurated the system of attaching a Students' Common Room to every college. A sum of Rs. 12,500 was sanctioned for building a Common Room for Presidency College students. Unfortunately, there was no site available whereon to construct the room. A class-room, (30 x 22 feet), therefore was adapted for immediate use. This, too, went a great way towards developing corporate spirit in the college.

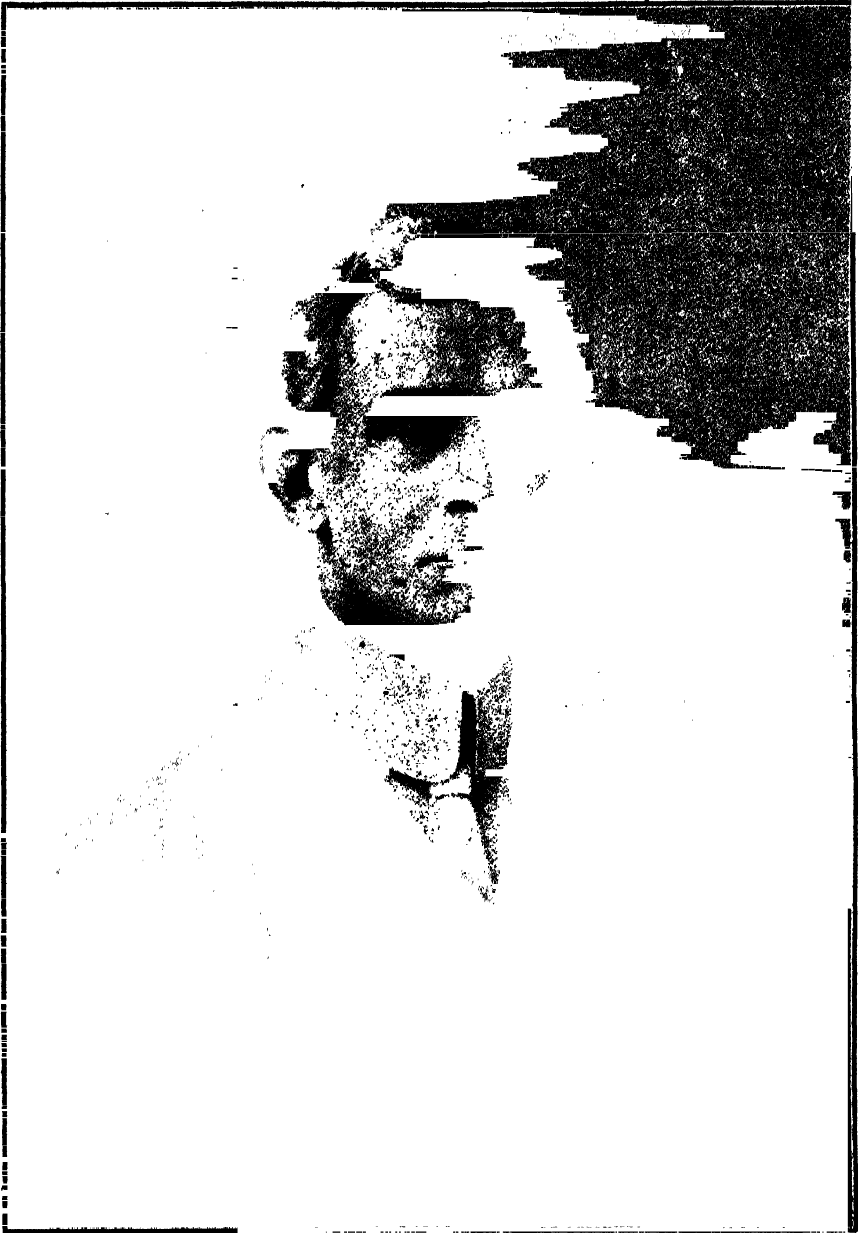

The period from 1890 onwards furnishes an interesting tale of structural emendations and extensions. They were necessitated, first, by the increasing number of Science students, and secondly, by the University laying down definite conditions regarding their practical training. In the Chemical Laboratory, the number of pupils outgrew the available seats in the session 1890-1891. A new Chemical Laboratory was, therefore, provided in 1893. The fittings were, in the words of the Principal, "on an elaborate and finished scale, including engines of ventilation for the supply of currents of air and other necessary purposes; and the appliances for practical work are on a par with those of good modern laboratories in Europe". The old Chemical Laboratory was subsequently, (in 1897) converted into a photographic and magnetic laboratory for the use of the Physics Department. An Astronomical Observatory was constructed in 1900 on the roof of the college building for accommodating "the four-and-a-half inch equatorial by Grubb presented to the college by the Maharaja of Tippera". The construction of a magnetic observatory at Alipore was sanctioned during this year for the use of the college, and the old Chemical Laboratory building was converted into a second Physical Laboratory in 1901 at a cost of Rs. 3,584. Government also sanctioned the construction of a Transit Instrument Room "over the southern half of the out-offices on the west of the Presidency College" at a cost of Rs. 6,000.

The Surveyor-General made a present of some valuable instruments including theodolites, etc., which were proposed to be placed in this room.

In June 1903, special Commercial Classes were opened in the college. They aimed at training boys for employment in mercantile firms. In the 1st Year Commercial Class, there were five students during the first session. They had "passed the examination for the 'C' Classes of the Hare School and the Uttarpara Government School" and paid the same fees as the students reading for the F.A. Examination. These classes were re-organised next year; and in July 1905 a new scheme of commercial education was introduced in consultation with the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce. The Commercial Classes were ultimately removed from the college in 1907 and formed a separate institution.

The Universities Act of 1904 introduced a new era in the history of Indian education. The Senate of the Calcutta University appointed in 1905-1906 two Commissions of Inspection for the purpose of ascertaining the present condition and the needs of affiliated colleges. Presidency College was, in the opinion of the Commission that inspected the Calcutta colleges, seriously overcrowded. They recommended that either the number of pupils (which was 698 on the 31st March 1906) should be reduced, or the college should be enlarged or rebuilt on an open site. Additional space was very badly needed: the Science Departments in particular were suffering from serious congestion. The plight of the Chemical Department appears to have been the worst. In addition to lack of space, it suffered from the dust and dirt of the neighbourhood; and inasmuch as important groups of magnetic and electrical measurements could not be made within an area surrounded by electric trams, it became impossible to teach the students the use of such instruments. The revised regulations of the University, which were promulgated by a Resolution of the Government of India dated the 11th August 1906, required that the candidates for the I.Sc. Examination (which was to be held for the first time in 1909) must produce a certificate of having done practical work in the laboratory. Hence, Chemistry Practical Classes had to be provided on an extensive scale for the 1st Year students of 1907. The other Science departments were also congested. The Biological Department had "entirely outgrown the accommodation allotted to it"; and as the new regulations made Botany and Physiology two different subjects, separate classes had to be provided for them. The laboratory accommodation of the Geological Department was also inadequate. A Geological Museum had been in the making; but the collection already made could not be utilised for want of space. The Astronomical Laboratory had also considerably developed; a temporary staff consisting of a Demonstrator and three student-assistants was sanctioned in 1903-1904, as well as the sum of Rs. 12,000 for the purchase of telescopes and other apparatus. The Physical Laboratory was no better off than the other Science departments in respect of available space.

To meet the requirements enumerated above, as well as to make adequate provisions for seminars and tutorial classes of the Arts Department, two alternative proposals were sent up by the authorities of the college: one advocating the extension of the present site, the other recommending its removal to a new building in the suburbs of the metropolis. The first proposal was accepted, and a general scheme of extension was laid down in July 1907 at a formal Conference presided over by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor. It was decided that 22 bighas of the adjoining land should be bought at a cost of Rs. 50,000 the bigha, "to provide space for an athletic ground, a gymnasium, additional library space, Arts class-rooms and laboratories, hostels and residential quarters, college hall and students' common room". The site was proclaimed in 1907, and in May 1908 five bighas of land were acquired for the Physics Laboratory at a cost of Rs. 2½ lakhs. It was estimated that the construction of this block alone would cost Rs. 2,52,225. The work began in 1910 in right earnest; but the remainder of the elaborate extension project was shelved for the time being.

In the meantime, on account of the approaching intermediate Examination in Science, immediate measures, though of a temporary nature, had to be taken for the adequate equipment of laboratories. The quadrangle on the north side of the college building, which was formerly used for the Gymnastic Classes, was accordingly called into requisition, and elementary laboratories for Physics and Chemistry were opened in corrugated iron sheds in 1909. At the same time, one room (33 × 22 feet) was added to the Chemical Laboratory building on the western side for use of the Physiology Department, and another room (29 × 27 feet) was built on to the new Elementary Physics Laboratory, for the use of the Department of Geology.

In deference to the suggestion made by the University Commission, the Director of Public Instruction ordered in 1907 that the number of admissions in the Undergraduate Classes of the college should not exceed 650. As regards the Post-graduate Classes, some of them had to be temporarily closed. Under the old regulations, no special affiliation was necessary for the M. A. examinations and Presidency College had been, till 1908, sending up candidates for the M. A. degree in almost all the subjects prescribed by the University. By the new regulations it became incumbent that Teaching Staff should be strengthened if the existing affiliations for the M. A. degree were to be retained. Proposals were accordingly sent up in 1907 for substantial additions to the staff which, at the moment, consisted of (besides the Principal) 20 Professors, 2 Lecturers, 5 Demonstrators, 9 Laboratory Assistants and 4 student-assistants. Pending the appointment of the required staff, the M. A. affiliation of the college was restricted, in 1909, to English (Group A) and Mixed Mathematics. Affiliation in History and in the new subject of Political Philosophy and Political Economy was granted later in 1909. Affiliation in the other subjects was also granted before long. M. A. and M. Sc. affiliations in Physics and Chemistry were obtained in 1912; and three years later the college was affiliated in Physiology and in Mental and Moral Philosophy.

The new regulations of the University had been introduced at a very fortunate moment for Presidency College. With a Principal of lofty ideals (Mr. H. R. James) as the head of the institution, and an Indian Civil Service officer (Sir Archdale Earle) as the Director of the Department, who would stop at nothing in pressing forward the undoubted claims of Presidency College to considerable expansion, there was little difficulty in carrying out several improvements, both internal and external. In order that final shape might be speedily given to the complete scheme of building extension which was drafted in 1908, the Local Government appointed a Special Committee in July 1910. The Government of India sanctioned a special grant of Rs. 8 lakhs for the proposed extension. The site chosen for the Physical Laboratory had already been cleared, and actual construction work began in August 1910. The Physical and Physiological Laboratories became ready for occupation in July 1912. The Geological Laboratory began its work in the new building in January 1913. The Botanical Laboratory was also ready before the session 1912-1913 had come to a close, and it was hoped that it would " come into use next session, when the Professor of Botany has been appointed and affiliation in the subject been obtained ". The new laboratory buildings were publicly opened by His Excellency Lord Carmichael, the first Governor of Bengal, on Monday, the 20th January 1913. They were named the " Baker Laboratories " in commemoration of the fact that their construction had begun in the régime of Sir Edward Norman Baker, the last Lieutenant-Governor of the province. It was decided that the date, 20th January, which had already an historical significance for the institution, would " henceforth be observed as the Presidency College Foundation [Founders'] Day ".

Now that all the laboratories, except the Chemical, were transferred to the new building, 27 rooms were set free in the old; 16 of these came to be occupied by the Chemical Laboratory and 11 were converted to general purposes. To the students' common room was added an adjoining room on the ground floor.

The Astronomical Observatory had been in need of expansion since 1918; some of its instruments were lying distributed on the roof of the college and of the Hare School. A dark room was provided for its use in 1922. In the course of the same year the Astronomical Society of India ceased to function and presented to the Observatory its 8 inch telescope.

It appears that the Principal was very hopeful about the entire improvement project taking effect in a few years' time. In his quinquennial report for the period ending 31st March 1912, he wrote: " A splendid group of new laboratories has been built and is partly already occupied. Land is being acquired for the building of a new hostel, and the rest of the scheme will go forward year by year as funds are assigned. When the whole scheme has been carried out, Presidency College will be what it has long ceased to be, adequately provided with accommodation for the work it has to do, and more than that, it will be, what it has never before been, a largely residential college, amply planned, and endowed with magnificent collegiate buildings in the very centre of Calcutta. A not very difficult exercise of the imagination can call up a picture of the college as it will appear seven or eight years hence. From College Street a clear view will be opened out through the present compound, over the site now occupied by stables (with the Astronomical Observatory above them), nearly to Halliday Street. The nearer portion of this open space will be gardens and tennis lawns, the further will be a football and hockey ground, 120 yards by 100; on one side of the gardens will be, as now, the old college building; on the other side the Hare School building (no longer the Hare School, but part of Presidency College) housing the students' common room and possibly the Library. On the south side of the football ground will be the new laboratory block, 130 yards long, already now nearly completed. In the south-west corner will be the Gymnasium. The whole of the west side, of which a clear view will be obtained from College Street, will be occupied by a hostel built to supplement the Eden Hindu Hostel and closely adjoining it. On the north side, facing the laboratories, will be three buildings—the Principal's house (nearest the present college buildings), residential quarters for three Professors (furthest west), and between them the college hall, capable of seating 1,100, and designed to meet all requirements as the centre of collegiate life. It is manifest that the college of 1920 will be very different from the college of 1907 or even 1912. The lines of this memorable transformation have been laid in the quinquennium 1907-1912."

The year 1920 has come and gone, and the vision still remains unrealized! But thanks to the energy and the enthusiasm of the present Principal, Mr. Stapleton, steps have already been taken towards making a beginning; and it is earnestly hoped that the next decade will see the realisation of Mr. James's dream.

For the purpose of enabling graduate students of the college to receive individual attention, the seminar system was partly introduced in 1908. A Philosophy seminar had been started by Dr. P. K. Ray when he was a Professor here in 1896. It was revived in 1908. An English seminar was started next year, and it was followed by a History seminar in 1910. Shortly afterwards, seminars for Political Economy and Political Philosophy were also formed. Although the seminars had in the beginning "to make head against indifference and even positive dislike", the lapse of a few months made the students themselves appreciate their aims and recognise their usefulness.

The seminars were meant for the graduate students of the college, and occasionally for Honours students of the 4th Year Class. For the Undergraduate Classes a system of tutorial instruction was organised in 1909. The scheme, which at first included the Arts side only, was extended to the Science side in 1913. It was at the same time decided that a complete record of the class exercise work of every student should be kept; and if that record was satisfactory, the student should be sent up for the University Examination. The test examinations were accordingly abolished, although the annual examination at the end of the first year of each undergraduate course continued to be held.

In the meantime, a fundamental change had been introduced in the management of the college by the establishment of a Governing Body in pursuance of Regulation No. 6 (a) as laid down in Chapter XVIII of the newly framed rules of the Calcutta University. It met for the first time on Tuesday, the 8th March 1910, and was originally composed of the Director of Public Instruction, the Hon'ble Member for the Calcutta University in the Bengal Legislative Council, the Principal and three Professors of the staff of the college,—the first named being the ex-officio President of the Governing Body. The personnel was slightly altered in May 1913, when the Director of Public Instruction ceased to be the President and was represented by the Assistant Director of Public Instruction as a member; the Principal of the college became the President of the Governing Body, and one of the other members of the college staff became Vice-President and Secretary. This arrangement, however, terminated on the retirement of Mr. James in 1916, when the Director of Public Instruction reverted to the Presidentship. The constitution was subsequently revised, and the Governing Body was made up of 9 members, viz., the Director of Public Instruction, ex-officio President, three nominated members unconnected with the college, (one of whom was the Vice-President), three elected members of the college staff, the Principal who was ex-officio Secretary, and the Bursar. Later still, full disciplinary powers were transferred from the Governing Body to the Principal.

At the request of the Governing Body, His Excellency Lord Carmichael consented in 1915 to become the first official Visitor of the college. It was a distinct gain to the institution; as such connection "strengthens the bonds between Government and the college, and by giving them a personal character freshens the springs of loyalty". It reminds one of the old days when the Hindu College was given sumptuous Government aid on condition that Government connection with the institution was emphasised by the appointment of an official Visitor. The successors of Lord Carmichael have continued to be Visitors of the college.

The University Commission of Inspection had brought prominently to notice the unsatisfactory position held by the Principal. "He is overburdened with routine work of a multifarious description", which, they were afraid, left him "little leisure for the consideration of questions truly educational and the adequate discharge of his responsibility for the intellectual and moral welfare of seven or eight hundred students". They recommended that the Principal should be relieved, wholly or in part, of his financial responsibilities and of the bulk of official routine work. The Director of Public Instruction not only supported the proposal of the Commission, but was also of opinion that the Principal of the premier college should be given an allowance in addition to his ordinary salary. The appointment of a Steward, on the 22nd June 1910, gave some relief to the Principal, as the "administrative work in connection with the college buildings and grounds, the hostel, the athletic club, the common room, the menial staff, etc.", was proposed to be made over to this officer.

As, however, the Principal had still to shoulder the financial responsibilities, the Governing Body, at the instance of Government, proposed three years later the appointment of a Dean and a Bursar. Agreeably to this proposal, the Secretary of State sanctioned both these posts in his despatch No. 193 (Public), dated the 12th November 1915, and two members of the teaching staff assumed the offices on the 16th September 1916. The Dean received an allowance of Rs. 100 a month, and the Bursar, of Rs. 150. The latter relieved the Principal of duties connected with financial business; the former interviewed the students in matters relating to the ordinary disciplinary work of the college. The Bursarship proved of real help, and the creation of the post was abundantly justified. The post of Dean, however, lived only for three years, and was abolished on the 15th September 1919, as it appeared that "although a good many students unquestionably demand interviews in regard to matters which do not require the Principal's decision or advice, yet the balance of advantage lay with a system which enabled all students to see him whenever they desired to do so".

It appears that a number of clubs and societies was coming into existence since the beginning of the present century. "Though their vitality was somewhat languid", observed Principal James, "they were both academic and corporate in character". But there was little reason for gratification at their activities; they lacked organisation. The seminars which, in course of time developed a markedly social character, supplied to some extent the want of permanent societies. Principal P. K. Ray tried in 1905 to blend the several societies into a Central Union; the project which he devised proved, however, short-lived. When increased energy was decidedly in evidence in the scattered societies of the college towards the end of 1917, the Union was revived. Originally, its purpose was to encourage the writing of papers and the holding of debates. The meetings that were held during the first session appear to have aroused interest and were well attended. A Code of Union Rules was framed at a general meeting of students held on the 7th September 1921; and some well-organised "Reunions" were held under its auspices in 1922. Two years later the scheme of Principal Ray was revived by Principal Stapleton, and the Union Rules were referred to a Committee for revision and modification. After prolonged deliberation the revised rules were published in March 1926 and unanimously accepted.

A "College Magazine" was started (or rather successfully revived) at the instance of the students themselves in 1914. The first number appeared in November of that year, under the editorship of Pramathanath Banerjee, a post-graduate student in History. In the words of Principal James "it revealed latent powers and is of good augury for the development of the college as a social organism in time to come". Managed mainly by the students, with occasional guidance and help of some members of the staff, it is highly creditable to Presidency College students that the magazine has continued its career of usefulness, the articles published therein being of no mean merit.

"Founders' Day" (inaugurated in 1913) was first celebrated in 1915. Owing to a variety of reasons, it could not, however, be celebrated in 1916. The next year, 1917, which marked the completion of a hundred years since the foundation of the Hindu College, Founders' Day was celebrated quietly, as the Empire was then at war. It has since been celebrated every year with more or less ceremony. At the celebration of 1925 His Excellency Lord Lytton, Governor of Bengal and Visitor of the College, presided. The celebration of 1926 "eclipsed all previous records". To quote the report of Principal Stapleton: "Not only did the number of guests exceed those in former years, but the occasion was utilised to unveil the portraits of three most distinguished ex-students of this college, Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri and Mr. C. R. Das, all of whom had died during the two previous years. The portraits were unveiled by Sir Ewart Greaves, Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University". As a complement to the celebration of Founders' Day, and on the eve of the compilation of the present "Register of Ex-Students," a remarkable gathering was held in the college premises on the 20th of March 1926, when old Presidency College students who had graduated at least fifty years ago (that is, before January 1876), met at an afternoon party, to which the Vice-Chancellor, the Member-in-Charge of Education, the Educational Secretary and the Director of Public Instruction were also invited.

It is pleasant to remark that all these efforts for the development of a sense of corporate life have not been in vain. A "college consciousness" unmistakable manifested itself when the students were asked for help in the census work of 1921. "It responded" wrote Principal Wordsworth, "by undertaking most of the work in its own ward, and for weeks beforehand some hundred and fifty students were busy wheedling the necessary information from reluctant Marwaris, indifferent Chinese, threatening goondas, using all their resources of tact, humour, patience, persistence, and every variety of language and gesture . . . . The experience showed the college to be well endowed with a sense of public duty, and many of the students to possess capacities of leadership."

Mention has been made already of some of the affiliations granted to the college after the introduction of the new regulations of the University. A summary of the affiliations as they stood in 1917 is given below:—

M. A.—English (Group A), Mental and Moral Philosophy, History, Political Economy and Political Philosophy.

M. A. and M. Sc.—Mixed Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Physiology and Botany.

B. Sc. Honours—Geology.

M. Sc. work in Geology was carried on by University Lecturers on the staff of the college.

B. A. Honours—Pali, Sanskrit, Arabic and Persian.

On the recommendation of a Committee appointed by the University to consider the re-organization of the studies after the B. A. and B. Sc. stage, new regulations were framed whereby the University assumed the entire responsibility for the teaching of post-graduate students. Presidency College, in consequence, was called upon at the beginning of session 1917-1918 to surrender its responsibility for the training of M. A. and M. Sc. students. It was, indeed, a retrograde step for the college; the ideal of continuous expansion till it evolved "into something approaching to the dignity and proportion of an Indian University", which was held before the college at the time of its foundation in 1855, was now almost doomed. The University scheme, it was urged, would save waste of energy and overlapping of work on the part of the teachers. The plea put forward was not without some amount of justification. But the loss of affiliation in subjects for higher study was a grievous blow to those who were devoted to the college and were jealous for the maintenance of its glorious traditions. They wanted to see that every subject taught in Presidency College should be carried to its highest state. Principal James, then in retirement in England, submitted for the consideration of the Syndicate a long Memorandum, dated the 8th August 1917, with reference to the recommendations of the Post-graduate Committee; but it was of no avail. Presidency College, in common with other colleges affiliated to the University, was shorn of its Post-graduate classes since the commencement of 1917-1918. The part-time services of some members of the college staff were lent to the University for the purpose of lecturing to the M. A. and M. Sc. students. Those students who elected to keep their names on the rolls of the college were allowed the privilege of using its libraries and laboratories. At the very commencement of the new scheme (that is in 1917-1918) there were 145 such students in the Principal W. C. Wordsworth.

5th Year Class and 136 in the 6th Year; during the next session (1918-1919) the number was 85 and 139 respectively. The number, as may be naturally expected, has been dwindling every succeeding year.

A medical examination of the students of the college was held in July and August 1924. It made the astounding revelation that no less than 59 per cent. of our pupils were general defectives; only 20 per cent. were passed as possessing normal health. This was, indeed, a serious problem. The only possible remedy that lay in the powers of the authorities was at once applied: games and physical exercises were, from July 1925, made compulsory for the students of the 1st Year Class. This compulsion has been extended to the 3rd Year Class from the beginning of the current session. The college Gymnasium has been fitted up with new apparatus, and a full-size playing-field on the Calcutta Maidan made available to the students of the college.

During the years 1925 and 1926 the Governing Body pressed on the attention of Government the desirability of giving effect to the college improvement scheme that was elaborated between 1907 and 1912. As a preliminary step, it was recommended that more land should be acquired to the north-west. In the March (1926) session of the Bengal Legislative Council a preliminary grant of Rs. 2 lakhs was made for "rounding off the Presidency College area"—the aim being, as the Finance Member (the Hon'ble Mr. J. Donald) put it, "to remove an unsuitable busti area in the vicinity and to provide, while conditions are favourable, land for the inevitable expansion of this institution". In consequence of the April riots of 1926, it became incumbent upon the Governing Body to send up proposals for the acquisition of further plots of land as well as for enclosing the compound. The necessity for some more buildings has also been duly brought to the notice of the Government.

By Government Resolution No. 3131 Edn., dated the 15th October 1923, a Presidency College Committee was appointed, with a view to advising on the future scope and staffing of the college and indicating possible lines of economy. Altogether, 18 meetings were held—the first coming off on the 25th August 1924; and the Final Report of the Committee was submitted on the 25th February 1926. Many changes have been proposed; and some of the proposals have been provisionally acted upon. It would be too early yet to include them in an historical introduction to the College Register.

The College Library.

The development of the several departments of the college has been traced in the earlier pages. But the Library—an important adjunct of the college—has been only casually mentioned. An attempt is, therefore, made here to give an idea of the growth of this department.

On the establishment of the Hindu College the promoters of the institution had not only to arrange for free tuition, but they had to provide the boys with books and slates as well. When the students finished their course, or otherwise left the college, these books were stored in the institution. This went on till 1824, when the fee system was introduced and the scholars were required to provide themselves with their own books. But a fair collection of books had grown up in the meanwhile; however little their intrinsic worth, these books formed the nucleus round which has been built the present Library.

In 1829, Government " made a large grant for the publication of English class-books and gave a further sum of 5,000 rupees to purchase books for the Library ", to which the boys repaired in large numbers. " The books borrowed by them ", remarked in later life a contemporary alumnus of the institution, very well read in literature, " show a great love of desultory reading, which after all is, according to Dr. Johnson, not so unprofitable as is generally supposed ". Literature and elocution, it appears, were the subjects to which the students of the period were chiefly devoted; and, in spite of Dr. Johnson, desultory reading appears to have produced really ludicrous results in many instances. " The students had all by heart ", observed Lord Macaulay in one of his Examination Reports, " the names of all the Dramatists of the time of Elizabeth and James I,—Dramatists of whose works, they in all probability will never see a copy: Marlowe, Ford, Massinger, Dekker and so on. But few of them knew that James II was deposed!"

With a view to creating and fostering the " Libarary habit " among students, the General Committee of Public Instruction offered in 1839 a gold medal to each college " to be awarded to the student who has made the greatest progress during the year in the knowledge attained from the books in the Library ". A few years later, in December 1849, the Council of Education decided to choose the subject and indicate the standard of efficiency to be expected of candidates who might compete for the Library medal. In the meantime (in 1847) a code of rules was framed by the Council of Education for the management of the Library and for the guidance of its users. These rules underwent revision in 1858; and, as the number of students using the Library had considerably increased by this time, it was thought advisable to introduce the novel practice of demanding a deposit of Rs. 10 from every user of the Library as caution money; this deposit was returned on the Librarian's certifying that the students owed nothing to the Library. It was during the same year that the Library books were registered, numbered and lettered,—apparently for the first time since its birth; and a catalogue, it is said, was in preparation, " which, when complete, was ordered to be printed ".

It appears that about 1858 the Presidency College Library had already a little over seven thousand volumes on its shelves. The books were, till 1847, placed on open shelves. In his letter dated 29th March 1847, Principal J. Kerr requested the Committee of Management of the college to provide a set of book-cases with doors in front, at a cost of about a thousand rupees, as he was certain that " the utmost vigilance of the Librarian cannot under present circumstances prevent books from disappearing ". The records do not definitely state whether a regular amount was available every year for the purchase of books. It appears that " books worth about Rs. 898 were added " in 1858. The report for 1862-1863 states that " the grant for the purchase of books has been increased by one hundred rupees, and with such additional aid, it may be hoped that the Library may at last become worthy of the institution, and rich enough to meet the requirements of Professors and students in the several departments. The collection of Law books, which was very meagre, has received several important additions, and besides its share in the general grant, there has been allotted to it a balance of Rs. 163 which remained unexpended from the grant which was years since made by Government for the formation of a class of music in the late Hindu College". In 1871-1872 the sum of Rs. 440 was spent on books. The report of 1883-1884 notes the addition of 427 volumes "exclusive of periodicals"; that of the following year, of 340 volumes, and so on, till in 1897-1898 we are told that only 62 books were added, there being no grant for the Library during the year; while the report of 1898-1899 mentions that the grant was "reduced from Rs. 2,900 to Rs. 2,600".

In the present collection of the Presidency College Library the oldest books are those which have come down as a legacy from its lineal ancestor—the Hindu College. These books bear the seal of the "Hindu College" or the "Anglo-Indian College". There are other old books which bear the mark of ownership of the "Fort William College"; these came as a gift to this institution in 1844. In 1845-1846, the Education Department "directed the authorities of our colleges to make the pupils pay for their own books as far as possible, duplicate copies for the Library being only furnished of such expensive and extended works as are known to be beyond the means of most of the scholars". It was hoped, and reasonably too, that this policy would gradually enable the colleges to build up "valuable and extended Libraries of general reference". Happily for this institution, its Library had not to depend for its expansion on Government grant alone: private munificence helped it a great deal in the good old days. So far back as the 14th of May 1829, Sir Edward Ryan appears to have presented 31 volumes of the "Library of Useful Knowledge". On the 29th October 1830, Mr. H. H. Wilson (then Junior Member and Secretary of the General Committee of Public Instruction) made a donation of a number of valuable books. Captain Richardson, it appears from the records, parted with ten copies of his "Literary Leaves" on the 13th May 1836, for the use of the college Library. The Right Rev. Bishop Daniel Wilson, who was Lord Bishop of Calcutta for over 25 years, presented to the Library a valuable collection of his works in 1847. In 1848 Dr. Mouat, Dr. Ballantyne and Raja Sir Radhakant Deb Bahadur presented several useful works. Space will not permit of all the illustrious donors being named here, but mention must be made of the Hon'ble Mr. William Wilberforce Bird (Deputy Governor of Bengal in 1842) who made a gift of a rich collection, of Sir J. W. Colville (the then President of the Council of Education) who presented several Law books in 1852, and of Mr. Richard Jones (Professor of Philosophy) who presented a very large lot of philosophical works.

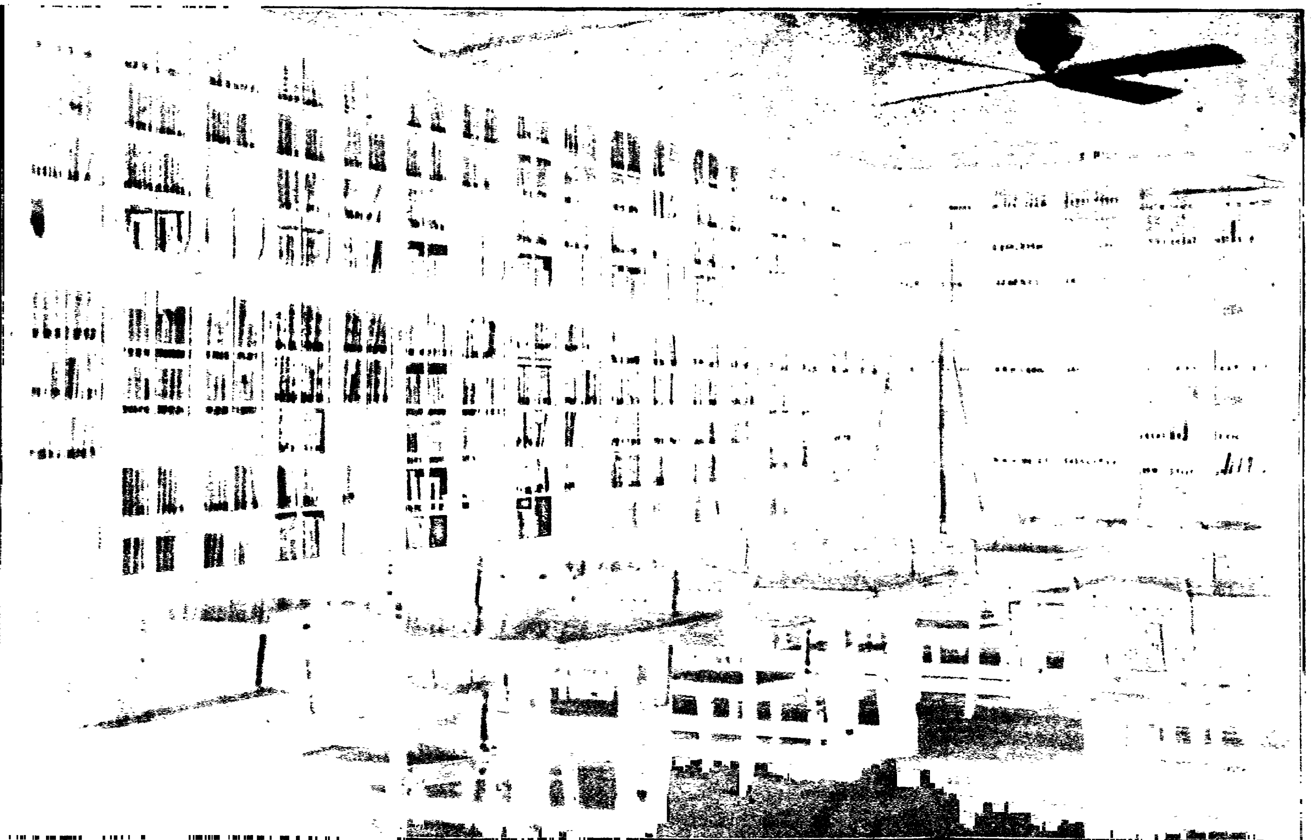

It has been already observed that a catalogue of the Library was in course of preparation in 1858. On the 16th of August of that year the authorities noticed that the catalogue was very imperfectly kept. Some 48 volumes from among those mentioned in the catalogue were missing from the Library; while there were 298 volumes, of which no mention was made in the catalogues; "nor from them can we ascertain how they have been placed there". So far as can be gathered from available records, the catalogue was not revised until 1862. The next edition came out in 1897, while a later one was printed ten years later. An Author-catalogue was published in 1909; and the current catalogue, which was printed in 1914-1915 in three parts, having become out of date, a new edition has just been taken in hand.

It is rather regrettable that, although the Library has always been an important factor in the field of education, systematic effort towards its improvement in this college was, for a very long time, conspicuous by its absence. It was not even noticed in the departmental reports. It rested with the Government of India to take the initiative in the matter. In their Home Department circular No. 886, bearing date February the 15th, 1870, they drew the attention of the Government of Bengal to the damage done to a valuable collection of Oriental manuscripts, the property of Government; and stated "that the Governor-General in Council considers it desirable that in all annual reports made by officers in charge of public Libraries, museums or collections, it should be specially stated whether or not the whole of the property is safe and in good condition".

The Presidency College Library of the present day is a considerable improvement on its former self. In fact, it is no exaggeration to say that since 1910 the Library has been transformed almost beyond recognition and to the great advantage of its users. The stimulus, it must be owned, came from the Indian Universities Commission of 1902. But the improvements inaugurated were mainly due to the indefatigable energy of Principal James, who very seriously took into consideration the affairs of the Library. The deposit system, introduced in 1858, was abolished by a departmental order of 1908. The very same year Mr. James constituted a Library Committee and framed new rules with the object of giving "facility for the greatest possible usefulness out of the Library by promoting the use of books in the Library". The Library grant was raised to Rs. 4,000 a year, and a number of open shelves were erected in which the most useful reference books were placed within easy access of readers. In 1910 was introduced the practice of placing on a table all current numbers of periodicals, so that readers might use them at will without being put to the trouble of asking for them. To facilitate further the habit of independent reading, separate chairs and single tables were provided for readers' convenience. The arrangement of the books on the shelves and the corresponding catalogue, however, were for a long time far from satisfactory. The Library staff having been increased by one member in 1909, the Library Committee took advantage of the opportunity thus offered to overhaul thoroughly the existing arrangement. It was proposed that a catalogue should be drawn up which would "enable readers not only to find rapidly any particular book they may wish to consult, but also to see at a glance what books are contained in the Library on any particular subject they are studying". To meet these ends the Dewey system of classification was "adapted with modifications to suit the special circumstances of the Library". The conditions prevailing at the time of the re-arrangement were mainly responsible for certain inaccuracies and overlapping of divisions; and there were some other minor causes. As Mr. James stated elsewhere, the present arrangement is not wholly what it should be, but it is distinctly an improvement on the old one.

In 1912-1913 all Science (including Mathematics) books and periodicals were transferred to a big room in the Baker Laboratory building measuring 58 feet by 31 feet by 22 feet: it was named the Peake Science Library. This relieved a considerable space in the centre of the main Library hall, which has been utilised to accommodate more seats for readers. There are now altogether 65 seats provided for readers in the Arts Library, and 60 in the Science Library. The total number of books in both these Libraries (which are, by the way, under the supervision of the Chief Librarian) is nearly forty-five thousand. About Rs. 8,000 are now spent annually on the purchase of books and periodical publications. The Library has on its staff one Librarian and three assistants. Its usefulness will be revealed by the quinquennial statistics given below of the number of volumes lent out:—

—	To students for home use.	To students for reading in the Library.	To college staff.	To seminars.
1921-1922	8,823	19,901	1,972	1,323
1922-1923	6,920	19,142	2,107	1,511
1923-1924	7,538	18,255	1,864	1,425
1924-1925	9,185	18,934	1,657	1,253
1925-1926	8,845	18,401	1,742	1,687

It has been recently proposed to provide steel racks and galleries along the four walls of the two eastern rooms and also on the southern portion of the Library hall; the two eastern rooms are to be divided into four cubicles each, by the erection of wooden partitions,—the cubicles to be used for tutorial classes. Some other minor improvements have also been proposed. Plans have been prepared, and the total cost is estimated at Rs. 24,500. The work will be taken in hand as soon as funds have been allotted for the purpose by the Government.
